ACTION OF GREEK KING PUTS QUIETUS ON ALLIES' HOPES

Though Not Regarded as Definite Step Toward Joining Forces With Teutons.

CHAMBER IS DISSOLVED

No Important Achievement on Either Side on Any of the Battle Fronts.

London, Nov. 13.—Although London refuses to share the consternation which the dissolution of the Greek chamber has caused in France, no attempt is made to minimize the seriousness of the situation nor to ignore the fact that King Constantine's action has put a definite quietus on all hopes of Greek co-operation in the near future.

The Greek king's suppression of the majority in the chamber of which M. Venizelos is the leader, is not regarded here as a definite step toward fulfilling a secret compact with the Central Powers. On the other hand, the present situation makes it obvious that whatever kindly intentions Greece entertains toward the Entente Powers must await the new elections, more than a month off.

The report that Lord Kitchener, secretary of war, had been sent on a mission to King Constantine, to whom he will offer new proposals, has received no confirmation, but the coincidence of his departure with the King's resolution to dissolve the chamber makes the supposition plausible. The report also gains interest from the announcement from several sources that an Austro-German mission has arrived at Athens to formulate a definite understanding between Greece and the Central Powers. At the same time, the Rumanian king is said to be receiving deputations from both sides.

Beyond the German announcement of the capture of the passes and heights of Jestrebac, carrying slightly further southward the Serbian drive of the Austro-Germans, there has been no recent achievement on either side in the Serbian campaign. French cavalry and patrols are reported to have surrounded Veles, but the Bulgarians still hold the town.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg's campaign in the Riga-Dvinsk region appears to have definitely ended and a counter movement of the Russian armies under General Ruzsky is gaining momentum.

ITALIAN STEAMER SUNK.

The Firenze Was Most Modern Vessel, Costing $1,000,0.0.

Syracuse, Nov. 13.—The Italian steamer Firenze was sunk by a submarine off the Egyptian coast. The Firenze, which was the best and most modern steamer belonging to the Compagnia Maritim and cost $1,000,000, left here on Tuesday for Alexandria. Forty miles off the Egyptian coast, it is reported, she was bombarded by an Austrian submarine and obliged to halt when a shot struck her rudder. Five boats were lowered for the passengers and crew, while the submarine continued to bombard the Firenze until she sank.

TWO WOMEN PRACTITIONERS OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CONVICTED.

Sentenced to Prison Charged With Causing Death of Two Actresses.

Berlin, via London, Nov. 14.—Two practitioners of Christian Science, Elizabeth Ahrens and Elizabeth Huesgen, have been convicted of criminal carelessness and sentenced to six months imprisonment for causing the death of Nuscha Butze and Alice Von Arnauld, two popular actresses of the Royal Theatre.

Owing to the prominence of the two actresses and the recent interest displayed here in Christian Science, the case proved to be a somewhat sensational one.

Frau Butze suffered from Bright's disease and Fraulein Von Arnauld from a rare fungoid disease of the skin, which physicians testified was incurable. They voluntarily placed themselves under the care of the Christian Science practitioners who attended them until shortly before their deaths.

The medical experts generally testified that under the customary treatment the lives of both women would have been greatly prolonged, and on this testimony the court found the defendants guilty.

RAILROAD RATES INCREASED

About Five Per Cent. Raise on Missouri Passenger and Freight Traffic.

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 13.—Increases in freight and passengers rates were today granted the railroads of Missouri by the state public service commission. The news schedules, effective January 1, give the roads practically an average increase of five per cent. on freight.

The commission granted the roads permission to charge a passenger fare of two and one-half cents a mile on one way tickets; two and one-quarter cents on round trip tickets and fixed a rate of two cents on mileage books for 500 or 1,000 miles. The railroads had asked for a three-cent rate. The present rate is two cents.

Temple, Texas, Nov. 13.—Bell county voted dry today in a local option election, thus abolishing 52 saloons.

Activity of German U-Boats Continues Successfully.

REVIEW OF WAR NEWS

Increased Resistance and Activity May Yet Save Serbian Army—Invasion of Teutonic Allies Seems to be Slower.

Chief interest in military operations continues to center among the Balkans. Field Marshal Mackensen's forces, fighting their way step by step from the north, are gradually eating into the ground over which lies the Serbian line of retreat. The Serbians, fighting as they are now in the mountain region, however, seem to be holding the invaders to slower progress.

In southern Serbia increasing resistance by the Serbian forces opposing the Bulgarians and the increasing activity of the Franco-British forces give hope to military observers in the Allied capitals that the enveloping operations by which the Serbians seemed likely to be cut off from retreat may not, after all, succeed. Allied operations around the Varndar river are reported to be bringing results helpful to the Serbians, particularly in the neighborhood of Veles.

Teutonic submarine activity continues in the Mediterranean. Announcements from London of the loss of merchant vessels seldom reveal where the sinking took place, but several steamers reported today as having gone down apparently have met their fate in Mediterranean waters. Of these the British steamer Den of Crombie, of approximately 5,000 tons, was the largest. There was loss of life apparently when the Italian steamer Firenze was sunk off the Egyptian coast, six passengers and 15 of the crew being reported missing. So far as learned no Americans were aboard.

From the German side there is lack of reports of operations on the eastern front. The latest Petrograd statement, however, indicated that the Teutons were losing ground in the neighborhood of Riga, and apparently had little immediate chance of forcing their way either to Riga or Dvinsk.

Italian attacks on Gorizia are continuing, and, according to Rome, are making progress as also is the offensive on the Carso front. No gains for General Cadorna's forces are conceded by Vienna, however.

In France and Belgium, operations are of a minor nature, Paris reporting only artillery and grenade fighting, fighting, while Berlin passes over the western front without comment in its official statement.

AMBASSADOR PAGE HAS NOT YET MADE REPORT

Italy May Be Making Thorough Investigation.

Officials at Washington Unable to Take Further Steps on Ancona Incident Until Further Information is Received.

Washington, Nov. 13.—All efforts of the United States government to learn the circumstances under which the Italian liner Ancona was sunk with a loss, it is believed, of several American nlives, thus far have been without result. Ambassador Page has sought information at the Italian foreign office and American consuls have been instructed to gather details, but on the important points—whether the attacking submarine was Austrian or German, and what opportunity was given passengers to escape—nothing official has been received. In the absence of information, officials realize they are unable to take any further steps.

Although it was believed at first that the Italian censorship was responsible for these delays, it is now believed that the inaccessibility of those who were rescued, and the conflicting and incoherent statements made by them has caused the Italian authorities to decide on a thorough investigation furnishing Ambassador Page with a report.

DR. GREIL A SURVIVOR

Was Only American-Born Passenger on Ancona, Says Report.

Rome, Nov. 13.—Thomas Nelson Page, American ambassador here, has received a report from the British vice consul at Tunis regarding the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona. It is stated in the report that the only American-born person who sailed on the Ancona was Dr. Cecil L. Griel, who is at Tunis. Dr. Greil, who is 42 years old, is a resident of New York. She came to Italy six weeks ago to do Red Cross work. Ambassador Page requested the consul to extend to Dr. Griel all possible assistance.

At ten, Dr. Greil was a cash girl in a store at Grand and Allen streets, New York city. She married at sixteen, and later having three children found herself called upon to support them. She said once that it took her fourteen years to save the

PRESENTS DATA ON GORICAR'S RECORD

His Statements Against Austrian Consuls Denied.

BY BARON ZWEIDINEK

Statement Made by Goricar Says Archibald Was Present When Papers He Was to Carry to Vienna Were Written.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Baron Erich Zwiedinek, charge of the Austro-Hungarian embassy, called at the State Department today and denied for his government the published charges of Dr. Goricar, formerly of the Austrian consular service, that Austrian consulates in the United States were "hot beds of propaganda" for fomenting strikes in munitions plants. He submitted data regarding the record of Dr. Goricar, and inquired what legal steps, if any, would be taken against the former consul. He was told that the Department of Justice already was investigating.

Later the embassy gave out a statement declaring that Dr. Goricar had offered to discontinue his utterances against Austria-Hungary should he be allowed a monthly sum of money.

The Department of Justice is particularly interested in the charges because of the bearing they may have on the case of James F. J. Archibald, who acted as messenger between the recalled Austrian minister, Dr. Dumba, and the Vienna foreign office. Goricar's statement declared Archibald was present when the papers he carried abroad were written and that he knew their contents.

H. Snowden Marshal, United States attorney at New York, was in conference today with Assistant Attorney General Warren over the recent bomb plots in New York against munition carrying ships, but it was said his visit had nothing to do with the Goricar case. Mr. Warren said the government expects to seek new indictments against Robert Fay and the others recently indicted with him in the bomb plots.

GORICAR MAKES STATEMENT

Says Charges Made to State Department Are Entirely Unfounded.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 13.—Dr. Goricar tonight, when shown the statement of Baron Zwiedinck given to the State Department at Washington, declared that the charge against him was entirely unfounded. He said in addition:

"The statement that I offered to discontinue my charges against Austria-Hungary shoul dI be allowed a monthly sum of money is answered by the fact that up to two days ago I had never made any charges against Austria-Hungary. Furthermore, I have never spoken to an Austro-Hungarian consul or vice consul since my return to the United States from Europe. I am not in want, and if I were I would sooner be dead than accept a penny from any official representative of Austria-Hungary. The denial of this person that Austrian consulates in the United States are hot beds for propaganda was answered to the satisfaction of the people of this country long ago when they discovered what Dr. Dumba was doing. The facts that I have made public are simply corroborative of Dr. Dumba's own vicarious confession.

"These men are desperate I challenge this representative of the Austrian embassy to name any consul or vice consul to whom I have ever made any such infamous proposal as he suggests and to name the time or the place where I ever approached any consular officer since my return to this country with the sole exception of a visit of courtesy to my former subordinates in San Francisco in the beginning of March of the present year."

ABOUT TO BOARD LINER WITH DYNAMITE IN HIS BAGGAGE

Abraham Cummings, Claiming to Be British, Arrested in New York.

New York, Nov. 13.—Two sticks of tunnelite a form of dynamite used extunnelite, a form of dynamite used extoday in the baggage of a man about to board the American liner St. Louis, five minutes before she sailed for Liverpool. The man gave hs name as Abraham Cummings, and his nationality as British. He was arrested and the explosive taken from him.

Detection of the dynamite was brought about by Cummings' strenuous objection to the customary examination of baggage. He professed surprise when the explosive was discovered and said that he had forgotten he had it with him. He had been a miner, he said, and was accustomed to carrying tunnelite. He had no fuse, however, he said, and consequently could not explode a tunnelite. Detectives, however, did not agree with him on this point.

WILL CONVEY RAILROADS.

Mexican Roads to be Returned to Civil Control December 6th.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Railways throughout Mexico will pass from military to civil control December 6th under a decree of General Carranza, head of the de facto government, transmitted today to his agency here. Advices to the State Department today continued to indicate improvement in general conditions in the southern republic.

The State Department probably will not grant the request of Carranza border authorities that they be permitted to take 100 Villa prisoners held at Agua Prieta across American territory to Piedras Negras.

ZEALANDIA SEARCHED WITHIN 3-MILE LIMIT

According to Statement Made by Vessel's Captain.

Says British Statement That the Vessel Did Not Have Its Papers Aboard Was Made to Deceive the American Public.

New York, Nov. 13.—How the American steamer Zealandia was boarded and searched on November 5 by officers and sailors from a British cruiser, afterward said to be the Isis, while lying at anchor northwest of Progreso, Mexico, is told by Paul Devantier, the steamer's captain, in a statement made public here today by the Fiske Trading Company, the Zealandia's owners. Captain Devantier claims that his vessel was within the three-mile territorial waters of Mexico, but the officer in command of the cruiser signalled at the time that he was not of the same opinion, according to Captain Devantier.

"Since the date of this protest—made by the Zealandia's captain to the British consul—we have received telegraphic advice," reads the Fiske company's statement, "to the effect that the port autnorities of Progreso have officially ascertained that the Zealandia was anchored at the usual discharging place, and was within three miles of land.

"The statement of the British authorities that the vessel did not have its papers aboard is evidently made for the sole purpose of deceiving the American public since not only did the British naval officers know that, in accordance with shipping laws and customs, the ship's papers were deposited with the American consul, but the British consul at Progreso even demanded an inspection of these papers from the American consul."

ESCAPE OF GERMANS STIRS NAVY DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS

Strenuous Steps May Be Taken to Guard Interned Sailors.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Navy officials are so stirred at the escape of a seaman from one of the interned German cruisers at Norfolk, following closely on the recent escape of a party of non-commissioned officers, that today they asked the State Department to what lengths the marine guards stationed about the ships would be justified in going to stop the series of unauthorized departures.

The possibility of bringing the Germans ashore and placing them in a guarded camp for safe keeping was being discussed again. The State Department will look up precedents to learn whether the marine guards have a right to shoot if necessary.

SAILINGS CANCELLED.

Two Italian Steamers Will Not Leave Ports for New York.

New York, Nov. 13.—The sailings of the Italian Line steamers, America and Palermo, from Italian ports for New York, have been cancelled, according to a cable today to the line's local agents. The agents thought the sailings were cancelled because the Italian government needs the vessels for transports and that the sinking of the Ancona was not responsible.

CALCULATES LOSSES IN KILLED TO BE 5,000,000

Basel, Switz., Nov. 13.—Col. Huesster, a Swiss military statistician, calculates the total losses in killed in the present war at 5,000,000.

NO REASON TO DOUBT AMERICA'S INTENTIONS

Says Berlin Paper on Note Sent Great Britain.

"Will Occupy Prominent Place in the History of International Law," It Says—Press Being More Deeply Impressed.

Berlin, Nov. 12, (via London, Nov. 13.)—The American note to Great Britain continues to occupy the attention of the press. Some of the newspapers giving evidence of being more deeply impressed by the document than in their earlier discussion of it. Thus the Koelnische Volks Zeitung, in a second editorial says:

"The note is an effective and exhaustive piece of work which does justice to the importance of the matter in hand with scientific profundity. It will occupy a prominent place in the history of international law.

"Whatever may be the practical political effect, doubts regarding America's good intentions are unjustified. No American statesman would compromise his nation with such a piece of double dealing.

"In the struggle for the freedom of seas America and Germany can co-operate to a great extent and it devolves upon all neutral states to support America's action. They dare not let this opportunity pass lest civilization in the world at large suffer."

The Frankfurter Zeitung also prints a second editorial saying that the jurists of the State Department without doubt intended to draft a document which would only give expression to the complaints of their own country, but beyond that, constitute a basis for the regulation of maritime law in the future. Referring to the closing passage of the note and President Wilson's expressed determination to struggle to make international law the basis of intercourse between nations, the newspaper says:

"One would think that when President Wilson solemnly undertakes such a duty it must mean more than a mere gesture intended to satisfy those who demanded real neutrality and non-partisanship from America. The President cannot recede from the honorable role which he has assumed of protector of the rights of neutrals without derogation to his own reputation and that of his country."

SETS VERDICT ASIDE

Judge Long Ignores Jury Decision in Suit in Buncombe Court.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 13.—A recent verdict in the Superior court of Buncombe county awarding property valued at $100,000 in the heart of this city to the plaintiff in the case of Lulu R. Miller et al., against against R. P. Johnston et al., was set aside this afternoon by Judge B. F. Long on the grounds of misconduct on the part of one juror in talking about the pending trial and because a second juror was shown to be related to one of the parties in the suit. Exception was taken by the plaintiffs to the ruling and the case will be appealed to the Supreme Court of this State.

FILE EXPENSE ACCOUNTS.

Senatorial Primary in Tennessee to be Held November 20.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Expense accounts of candidates in the primary campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Tennessee were filed today with the secretary of the Senate. Senator Lea has spent $1,388.50 of which $225 was contributed by personal friends. Representative Kenneth D. McKellar's expense accounts showed disbursements of $4,909.71 and contributions aggregated $2,800.

Former Governor Malcom Patterson testified to expenditures of $1,252.05, and contributions of $1,430. The primary election will be held November 20th.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT CHARGED WITH GRAFT

Disclosure of War Munitions Scandal is Predicted.

F. Curtis Morgan, Claiming to be British Lieutenant Colonel, Attacks Methods of Placing Contracts in America.

New York, Nov. 13.—F. Curtis Morgan, who says he is a lieutenant colonel of the British army and is in this country to place contracts for war munitions, issued a statement here tonight attacking the method of his government in making war contracts in the United States and predicting that an investigation begun by John Annan Brice and Lord Northcliffe will disclose a "war munition scandal that will stir all England and the United States." The statement alleges extravagance and corruption with contracts already placed in the United States and declares that the British censorship has made it impossible to get reports of the investigation into the English press.

Morgan complains that he had been prevented from executing war contracts and that the United States neutrality board has prevented him from sending sea-going launches to England, although he says the same board permitted the sending of 10 submarines to England which were contracted for by others. The existence of graft in this country is charged by Morgan in connection with the shipments of goods from here to England which are re-shipped to Scandinavian countries and Holland, ultimately reaching Germany, and he predicts that if American merchants "refrain for six months from this practice the Allies will win complete victory and it will be unnecessary for the United States to spend millions on defensive operations."

There is no lieutenant colonel F. Curtis Morgan in the British army list.

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY STOP BY ROADSIDE AND EAT LUNCH

President, Mrs. Galt and Her Mother on Long Motor Trip.

Washington, Nov. 13. — President Wilson, his fiancee, Mrs. Norman Galt, and her mother, Mrs. W. H. Bolling, today ate a roadside picnic lunch together in the course of a 150 mile automobile ride, which took them through Baltimore, Westminster and many small towns and villages in Maryland. They returned after dark, and dined at the White House.

Soon after leaving Westminster, the President's automobile was run up a side road and there the party ate the lunch they had taken with them from the White House. Farmers driving along the main road nearby noticed them and stood up in their wagons to get a better view of the picnic party.

CLUB NOT TO BE SOLD.

Cincinnati Not Negotiating With Federal League, Says President.

Cincinnati, Nov. 13.—A rumor that the officers of the Cincinnati baseball club were negotiating "with the Federal League people for the sale of the club or with a view of having them put capital in it," was emphatically denied in a statement issued by President August Herrmann following a meeting of the stockholders of the club here today.

The president's report shows that while weather conditions for the past year were the worst in the history of the club, the loss in operating during the season was only $5,400.

Boston, Nov. 13.—This port was led only by New York in volume of exports for the month of October, the total, it is estimated, reaching $15,000,000. This was greatly in excess of the monthly average.

"ENGAGED" TO MAN EXISTING ONLY IN HER IMAGINATION

SHIPPED TO ATLANTA

Strange Delusion of Miss Julia Choate Crumley, an Atlanta Music Teacher.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 13.—Dr. Alleyne Hensley, announced in formal wedding invitations and in social columns of local newspapers as the fiance of Miss Julia Choate Crumley, a music teacher here, existed only in her imagination, it became definitely known today. Not until Miss Crumley had gone to Chicago, "identified" the body of an unknown person, killed in a railroad accident and shipped here as that of Dr. Hensley, did her family and friends suspect anything unusual.

She is being attended by nerve specialists today at the home of her father, the Rev. Howard Lee Crumley, well known former Methodist minister.

Controversial statements made by Miss Crumley after she arrived with the body led friends of the family to call a physician to observe. It is said that she stated to him that Dr. Hensley was a creature of her mind and that the identity of the body at the undertaking establishment here was unknown to her.

Funeral Had Been Announced.

The funeral had been set for Thursday at the undertaker's, but it was announced yesterday that it had been postponed. Those who saw the body today said it evidently was that of a man not accustomed to life usually led by a surgeon. An effort was being made to have Chicago authorities take it back.

Two years ago Miss Crumley was at Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore for an operation. On her return she told family and friends that Dr. Alleyne Hensley had performed the operation and that they had fallen in love with each other. Letters she received, she said, were from "Dr. Hensley," whose home she said was in Quebec, Canada.

Two weeks ago invitations to the wedding on November 17th were issued and published notices went so far as to give the details of the forthcoming wedding, stating that the 11-year-old daughter of Dr. Hensley would be a flower girl.

Went to Purchase Trosseau.

Miss Crumley left Atlanta about the time of the announcement saying she was going to New York to purchase her trosseau. Last week relatives received a message saying she had received a telegram to the effect that "Dr. Hensley" had been badly injured in a train wreck. Another message from Chicago said he had died before she had arrived and that she was bringing the body here.

What disposition will be made of the body has not yet been decided, relatives stated tonight. The undertaker said he had received no instructions, although reports from Chicago said the undertakers who prepared the body for burial there expected it to be returned to them.

Reports that the local police would make an investigation of the incident were denied. At police headquarters tonight it was said some inquiries had been made but that apparently it was not a matter for the local police department.

TO LEAVE BODY IN ATLANTA.

Chicago Authorities No Further Interest in Its Disposition.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The unidentified body taken by Julia Choate Crumley to Atlanta, Ga., to be buried as her fiance will be left there so far as the authorities in Chicago are concerned. Neither the coroner's office nor the casket company which Miss Crumley paid to ship the body to Atlanta have any further interest in its disposition it was announced tonight, and will not bear the expense of returning the corpse to this city.

DANISH STEAMER CHASED FOR 17 HOURS By BRITISH CRUISER.

Left New York Wednesday for Norfolk to Take on Cargo of Coal.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 13.—Racing at full speed the Danish steamer Vinland arrived in Hampton Roads today after having been chased for over 17 hours by a British cruiser supposed to have been the Corona. The Vinland, commanded by Capt. Charles Moller, left New York at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning for this port to load cargo for South America.

The chase continued until 9 P. M. Wednesday, when the Vinland, with the aid of darkness and thick weather, reached Delaware Breakwater and anchored. She remained there until 4 A. M. Friday when with a dense envelopment of the coast she made her way to Cape Henry. She was never farther than a mile and a half off shore.

Captain Noller went to New York tonight to report the matter to the owners.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 13.—The collection taken at the Yale bowl during the Yale-Princeton football game today for the Red Cross Relief Fund, it was announced tonight, amounted to $6,276.80.

RUSSIAN SETTLERS IN MANCHURIA HEED CALL

Bravely Enlist to Fight For Their Emperor

Scarcely a Home in the City of Harbin Has Escaped Call for Reserves—Soldiers Comforted by Their Religion.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)

Harbin, Manchuria, Oct. 30.—Russia's last call for reservists took 3,000 men from this city, which has a population of 80,000 inhabitants. Although Manchuria is not Russian territory and Harbin is nominally a Chinese city, Russian control of the railways and other great corporations, which are developing th Manchuria, has made the line between Siberia and Manchuria very imaginary. For many months after the war began Manchuria did not feel the effects of the struggle, but recently it has fallen heavily under the grip of war. Troop and supply trains, which are robbing this new country of its settlers, its livestock and its grain, pass through the city constantly. Scarcely a home in Harbin has escaped the last sweeping call for reservists and recent casualty lists bear the names of many young Russians who left Manchuria to fight for their emperor. All business in Manchuria not directly connected with war supplies is practically at a standstill. The staffs of business firms have been depleted and in many offices the work is being carried on chiefly by young Danes and other European neutrals.

Before the Russo-Japanese war there were few settlers in this part of Manchuria and Siberia. Since that time the Russian government has offered very favorable terms in Siberia, near the Manchurian border. These men were carried east with their families at very low rates. Immigrant lodgings were afforded at various points along the railway and the government advanced large sums of money to get the new farmers started.

Now the very men who were brought to Manchuria at such great expense and pains are being torn from their new prairie homes to join the army. But there is little grumbling on the part of the stolid peasants. They do not question a call from Petrograd. The same power which made it possible for them to acquire a farm in this new country now demands their service and they start for training camps with the blessing of the priests who have their complete confidence.

The reservists from various towns along the western parts of the Trans-Siberian railway are taken chiefly to Harbin or Vladivostok for mobilization. At nearly every station reservists and their families are waiting for orders. The government has provided chapels in many of the railway stations located far from a Russian church. Traveling priests hold services in these occasionally, and at this time they are busily holding masses for the men about to leave their families for the front.

At one station, east of Harbin, the correspondent of the Associated Press saw an open air mass held for 300 men who were about to enter a troop train. The men were closely grouped about the priest. He wore a yellow satin robe, richly embroidered in gold and held aloft a golden cross which reflected the rays of the sun, which was just setting at the edge of the vast prairie behind him. The reservists chanted the responses with unwavering voices and listened with rapt attention to the priest. Their religious fervor was shown especially by the eagerness with which they pressed forward to have their brows moistened with holy water after the priest had pronounced the benediction. Many of the reservists led their sons forward with them so they might stand together before the priest and receive his blessing.

Throughout the service the wives, mothers and sisters of the reservists stood at a respectful distance and listened mutely to the inspiring singing of their menfolk. They had no part in it and manifested more of the enthusiasm shown by the robust men, standing with bared heads, completely under the sway of their spiritual adviser whose intensity of manner was heightened by his unusual garb. No man could have more closely approached in appearance the great artists' conception of Jesus Christ and the priest's inspiring influence upon the peasants starting upon such an unhappy mission was little less than miraculous.

Even the tearful embraces of wives and mothers did not dampen the ardor of the men, who bravely answered the warning whistle of the waiting engine and sang the Russian hymn as the train whisked them off to an uncertain fate.

Every troop car contains an icon, a brass picture of Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, or one of the saints. Usually a candle is kept burning near this after the custom of the orthodox Russian home. The soldiers seem to take great comfort in their religion, and on their long ride across Siberia, may be heard chanting hymns more frequently than other songs.

HOLD LENGTHY CONFERENCE.

Believed There Was Exchange of Views Concerning Ancona Incident.

Rome, Nov. 12. (Delayed)—A lengthy conference between Foreign Minister Sonnino and Thomas Nelson Page, the American ambassador, is believed to have brought about a full exchange of views concerning the Ancona. The nature of the conversation has not been revealed, but there is reason to believe that the Italian viewpoint was fully presented, reflecting a strong feeling that the sinking of the liner was such a flagrant breach of international law that neutral governments should adopt an energetic course to secure complete reparation.

DETAILS NOT KNOWN

Believed in Vienna the Ancona Was Warned Before Sinking.

Vienna, (via London), Nov. 13.—No report has yet been received from the submarine which sank the Italian liner Ancona and it may be several days before one is available. Meanwhile the Austrian war office has no details regarding the incident further than those contained in the Italian press. They point out that even these reports first admitted that the Ancona tried to escape and disregarded the signals of the submarine.

It is considered virtually out of the question that the submarine sank the liner without warning. In any event, however, no actual complications are expected.

WAVED AMERICAN FLAG

American Passenger on Ancona Made Desperate Effort to Save Ship.

Rome, Nov. 12, (Delayed in Transmission).—Giovanni Martini of Reggio, Calabria, a survivor of the Ancona, in describing the scenes at the sinking of the liner, said that the first note of warning to the passengers in the steerage, who were dancing and listening to music at the time, was a sound that was taken to be a clap of thunder.

"The ship slowed down," said Martini, "but the music continued until a ripping sound was heard, followed by a woman's screams. Everybody then seemed to understand what was happening and pandemonium was let loose.

"I shall never forget the American, Pasquale Laurino, who had the courage to put himself in evidence by mounting the deck railing. Standing upright he waved a large American flag in a desperate effort to save the ship by showing that there were Americans on board. I don't know what became of him. I think he was killed, as he disappeared suddenly."

SAW ATTACK FROM BOATS

Dr. Griel Tells Graphic Story of Sinking of the Ancona.

Paris, Nov. 13.—Passengers aboard the Italian liner Ancona were compelled to seek safety in the boats while the steamer was subjected to cannonade fro man Austrian submarine according to a graphic story of the sea tragedy told by Dr. Cecile L. Grell, of New York, to the Havas correspondent at Ferryville. The American woman escaped only through her ability as a gymnastic. She tried vainly to find a place in two boats but there was no room for her. She saved herself by dropping from the deck into a launch which already was in the sea. Her maid was killed in their cabinet by a gun shot.

Dr. Grell's story indicates that the torypedo which sent the Ancona to the bottom was not fired until the steamer had been riddled by shots from the guns of the submarine.

ROTARY DOLLARS TO MAKE THE ROUNDS

Each Member of Live Boosting Organization Will Join in Movement.

One of the most novel features of Corn Show week in Wilmington will be the circulation of the Rotary dollars. Practically every member of this live boosting organization has secured 25 Rotary dollars, these being detached to certificates on which are blank spaces for the signature of those handing the money during the week. These dollars are to be used in the payment of just debts incurred by citizens of Wilmington and are not to be sent out of the city.

The certificate and folder that has shown by the number of names to have been circulated or passed the greatest number of times and presented to Rotarian Milton Calder at the Atlantic Trust and Banking Company, corner of Front and Market streets, in exchange for another certificate before P. M. Saturday night will receive from the Rotarian putting the certificate in circulation the sum of $5 and from the Rotary club an additional $5.

SOUTH CAROLINA IS DOWNED BY VIRGINIA ELEVEN 13 TO 0.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 13.—The University of Virginia defeated the University of South Carolina here this afternoon 13 to 0, the visitors scoring two touchdowns in the first eight minutes of play. One touchdown followed a poor pass for a punt in South Carolina's territory. Virginia's other score came through straight football. Mayer, the Virginia star, was so well covered during the game that he was unable to get started with his long end runs. Folger did most of the ground gaining for Carolina, getting away for runs of 28 and 35 yards. Carolina held for downs on her own five-yars line in the third period.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Five years time and an expenditure of approximately $27,000,000 is required for the thorough rehabilitation of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, now in the hands of a receiver, according to the special report of J. W. Kendrick, made public here today.

London, Nov. 13.—Emperor William on Thursday passed through Orsova, Hungary, on his way to Sofia where he will visit King Ferdinand for two days, according to a dispatch from Copenhagen, to the Daily Mail.

FAIR AT KINSTON A SUCCESS BEYOND ALL EXPECTATIONS

Already Planning Next Year's Event on Bigger and Broader Lines.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Kinston, N. C., Nov. 13.—Kinston's first fair ended last night after a week successful "far beyond the most extravagant expectations," according to F. Clyde Dunn, the president. For his part in making the event the success that it was, J. Herman Canady, the secretary of the association, was last night presented a handsome gold watch by his fellow-directors. The exhibits, said by people who have followed the North Carolina circuit for years to be the most complete ever seen in the State, almost overflowed the big hall that had been erected near the main entrance. The building will have to be enlarged to twice its present size next fall, it is stated. The association, organized by the chamber of commerce, a non-profit earning corporation, will spend every cent of the profits in improving the buildings and grounds. The attendance was large enough and the receipts sufficient to warrant throwing open the gates on the last afternoon to all not caring to pay. Chamber of commerce officials today admitted that an idea is entertained of making the local fair, which was contributed to by ten counties, the largest in the South. Representatives of the association will scour the country next spring in search of new features. The famous fairs in Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania will be visited and their methods studied.

MASS MEETING MONDAY NIGHT.

Baseball Fans Failed to Meet, on Account of Bad Weather.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather last night, the mass meeting of the baseball fans, to have been held in the court room of the court house, was postponed until Monday night. The following appeal to the merchants and citizens of Wilmington was written last night by a loyal fan:

"Do the people of Wilmington not want organized baseball? Do the merchants realize that they will reap more benefits than anyone else? We have had three meetings in regard to baseball in Wilmington and only a few people have attended. A public spirited citizen has promised to subscribe one-tenth of any amount raised. Citizens, do you know what an organized baseball team will do towards advertising Wilmington? It seems to me that Wilmington, a town of 35,000 people, can support organized baseball and should have it. Think of it! If 750 men would give $200 a piece, this would furnish a good fund to start on and you can get a franchise in the Virginia League for nothing.

"On account of the inclement weather last night, only a few people were on hand to attend the meeting. Citizens, as one of you, I appeal to you and ask you to meet at the Court House Monday night at 8 o'clock and put Wilmington on the map as a hustling town. I want to see Wilmington grow and am sure you could advertise the town in no better way. It is up to you, everyone of you. Let's put our heads together. It is requested that the canvassing committee meet Monday night and report promptly."

A New Model Typewriter

The No. 9 OLIVER
The Standard Visible Writer

BUY IT NOW!

Yes, the crowning typewriter triumph is here!

It is just out—and comes years before experts expected it. For makers have striven a lifetime to attain this ideal machine. And Oliver has won again, as we scored when we gave the world its first visible writing.

There is truly no other typewriter on earth like this new Oliver "9." Think of touch so light that the tread of a kitten will run the keys!

CAUTION!

The new-day advances that come alone on this machine are all controlled by Oliver. Even our own previous models — famous in their day — never had the Optional Duplex Shift.

It puts the whole control of 84 letters and characters in the little fingers of the right and left hands. And it lets you write them all with only 28 keys, the least to operate of any standard typewriter made.

Thus writers of all other machines can immediately run the Oliver Number "9" with more speed and greater ease.

WARNING!

This brilliant new Oliver comes at the old-time price. It costs no more than lesser makes — now out-of-date when compared with this discovery.

For while the Oliver's splendid new features are costly—we have equalized the added expense to us by simplifying construction.

Resolve right now to see this great achievement before you spend a dollar for any typewriter. If you are using some other make you will want to see how much more this one does.

If you are using an Oliver, it naturally follows that you want the finest model.

17 CENTS A DAY!

Remember this brand-new Oliver "9" is the greatest value ever given in a typewriter. It has all our previous special inventions—visible writing, automatic spacer, 6¼ ounce touch—plus the Optional Duplex Shift, Selective Color Attachment and all these other new-day features.

Yet we have decided to sell it to everyone on our famous payment plan—17 cents a day! Now every user can easily afford to have the world's crack visible writer, with the famous PRINTYPE, that writes like print, included FREE if desired.

TODAY—Write For Full Details and be among the first to know about this marvel of writing machines. See why typists employers, and individuals everywhere are flocking to the Oliver. Just mail a postal at once. No obligation. It's a pleasure for us to tell you about it.

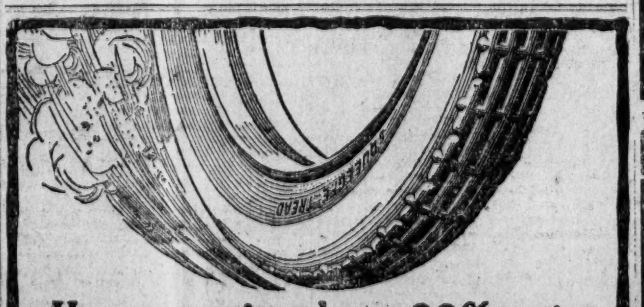
Munition Shop of Bethlehem Company Burning in $4,000,000 Fire.

These great munition plants, among the very largest in the country, were burned within 24 hours, the one machine shop No. 4 of the Bethlehem Steel Company in Pennsylvania, and the other the wire shop of John A. Roebling's Sons in Trenton, N. J. In the Bethlehem plant there were some 800 guns almost ready for shipment to the Allies in Europe. The loss there was placed at $4,000,000. The Roebling plant was making wire for the Allies, wire to be placed in front of trenches to prevent charges of the German soldiers.



Have your tires been 99% satisfactory during the past two years?

If in 1914 and 1915 you have used ten tires and one has "gone bad," you have only been 90% satisfied. If two have "gone bad," your score is reduced to 80%.

In 1914 and 1915, out of every million Diamond Squeegee Tread Tires, 990,000, or 99% have made good.

Was your percentage that high?

If nine friends and yourself had between you, in 1914 and 1915, bought 100 Diamond Squeegees for your cars, but one tire out of the whole lot would have required adjusting.

If it takes you 15 years to use up 100 tires yourself, in all those years only one Diamond Squeegee will cause you any trouble.

These are facts based on the law of averages—upon which billions are invested in the life insurance business.

YALE TRIUMPHS OVER THE PRINCETON TEAM

Present Powerful Combination Against the Tigers

Thrills, Individual Playing Prowess and Form Upset Not Surpassed on Gridiron in Recent Years. Guernsey Yale's Hero.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 13.—Yale's football eleven today rose Phoenix-like from the ashes of a disastrous preliminary season and defeated Princeton 13 to 7. No gridiron classic in recent years has furnished greater thrills, individual playing prowess or form upset than this most surprising triumph of the Blue over the Orange and Black.

It was a case of a powerful football combination just beginning to find itself, overwhelming by brute strength an eleven far more finished in playing tactics, but lacking the ability to cope with a Yale eleven fighting desperately. As a team, the Princeton machine was superior to the Blue, but the smooth Tiger juggernaut was ripped apart by a bulldog squad gone berserk.

Gridiron heroes rose and fell during the struggle, but none reached the heights attained by Otis L. Guernsey whose clever field goal kicking paved the way for a Yale victory. Twice in the period Guernsey drove the ball through the Tiger goal posts when Captain Wilson, of the Yale team, found that the eleven as a whole was unequal to the task of taking the ball across the opponents' line. Both kicks were made from near midfield and the performance placed Guernsey among the kicking stars of football.

"Pie" Way, pitcher for the Blue baseball team, shared the glory of the victory with Guernsey, for it was his fortune to scoop up a fumbled punt by Tibbott and race across the goal line for Yale's only touchdown. Way's run was one of the most spectacular features of a struggle that bristled with startling plays and tonight Guernsey, Way, Captain Wilson and Emergency Coach Tom Shevlin are heroes here.

For Princeton nothing remains but the memory of a season that started in a blaze of glory and closed in the bitterness of unexpected defeat by both Yale and Harvard.

Close to 60,000 spectators thronged the great Yale bowl. The weather and gridiron conditions were perfect. From the opening it was seen that the Elis had been keyed up to the doer stage of football. They made up in individual power and brilliancy what they lacked in team work and strategically it was this fighting spirit, aided by the breaks in luck and Princeton errors that swung the pendulum of victory to the Blue.

The ball was carried or kicked up and down the gridiron throughout the first quarter without decided advantage for either team. With the beginning of the second period, the Elis tried a sustained attack and carried the ball across mid-field by line plunging.

Shifting to a forward pass advance, they found the Tiger unawed, and after the ball had been grounded without gain, Guernsey kicked his first field goal of the day from his own 46-yard line. It was one of the longest kicks in Yale-Princeton football history.

Almost immediately Guernsey duplicated the feat. On Princeton's kick-off Captain Wilson had run the ball back to midfield. Four more rushes placed it inside Princeton's 30-yard line. Here Captain Wilson was forced again to call on Guernsey who, standing on the 36-yard line, hoisted the ball between the goal bars.

Princeton turned and carried the pigskin to inside the Yale 10-yard line. Foot by foot the Tigers fought their way into the Blue defense, and after a final smash and heave, Referee Tufts untangled the mass of players and awarded a touchdown to Princeton when he found Driggs, with the ball clutched in his arms, an inch or two over the line. Tibbott quickly converted the touchdown into a goal—and Princeton's scoring for 1915 was completed.

After 15 minutes rest, Yale set out to regain the lead. Parisette kicked off for Princeton and on the first line up Yale punted to the Tigers 25-yard line where Tibbott dropped the ball after a fierce tackle by Wilson and Church. Way, who was on their heels, scooped up the bounding ball and raced over the line for a touchdown. Guernsey kicked goal and the Yale cohorts went wild.

Princeton returned the attack with another burst of speed and open play which they maintained through the rest of the period and the final quarter. In one way or another the Elis stayed each attack when within the shadow of their own goal, and the final whistle found them exhausted and tottering but with the ball safe in their possession near midfield after Princeton's dying effort ended with a fumbled lateral pass on the Blue 8-yard line.

ARMY WINS HARD FOUGHT STRUGGLE FROM MAINE.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The Army won from Maine today 24 to 0, in a hard fought game. The visitors proved to be weaker than was expected and the Army made many substitutions throughout the game. Oliphant, the former Perdue star, was again the brilliant performer for the Cadets. He was removed during the third quarter to make room for a substitute, but, at the time of his retirement, he had tallied all of the army's points, 17 at that period of the play.

GEORGIA AND GEORGIA TECH TIE GAME WITHOUT SCORING

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 13.—On a slippery field inches deep in mud and in a drizzling rain, Georgia and Georgia Tech played a scoreless tie here today. Georgia outplayed Tech throughout and the ball was in Tech's territory most of the time. Neither goal was endangered except near the end of the first period when Georgia, aided by Tech, fumbled, carried the ball to Tech's 8-yard line only to lose on a fumble.

A. & M. OVERWHELMED BY GEORGETOWN TEAM

Frequent Penalties on Both Sides Marred Game.

Riddick Was Star for Carolinians Who Were Held Helpless Before Line Smashing of Hill Toppers. Score was 28 to 0.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Georgetown overwhelmed the North Carolina Aggies, of Raleigh, on the hill top today 28 to 0 in a football game marred by frequent penalties for infraction of the rules and unnecessary roughness. Both teams were about equal offenders and each had a player banished—Right Guard Young, of A. & M., and Left Halfback McNamara, of the Hill Toppers.

Play in the first period favored the Aggies, but in the second Georgetown's smashing attack against tackles and end told and Right Halfback Wall scored a touchdown. In the last half the locals added an aerial attack to this line smashing, and three touchdowns resulted, while the Carolinians were helpless when they got the ball.

Right End Corcoran scored the second touchdown on a 20-yard sprint after catching a long pass from Gilroy. Leighty added another on straight football and the last one, in the final period, came when Cusack duplicated Corcoran's feat on a pass from Gilroy.

Riddick was easily the Aggies' star, frequently tearing up the Georgetown line, but the other backs did not support him consistently. Wall's ground gained featured for Georgetown.

WHY A. & M. LOST THE GAME

"Our Substitutes and the Poorest Officials I Ever Saw"—Hegarty.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 13.—"Our substitutes and the poorest officials I ever saw caused our defeat," said Coach Jack Hegarty after today's football contest between A. & M. College, of Raleigh, and Georgetown University, which resulted in a score of 28 to 0 in favor of the home team.

The game was featured by the roughest playing ever seen on a college gridiron. The Georgetown boys repeatedly slugged and kicked the Tar Heel lads, but Umpire Bryan Morse seemed to be blind to any of these attacks. After the game had been won, however, Morse did put several of the Georgetown boys out of the game for rough work. Had he done so early in the game, the result might have been different.

Carolina outplayed the locals in straight football. They were unsuccessful, however, in each and every attempt at open football. Riddick, too, was disappointing to his friends. While he played a good game, he did not show his usual form and those who expected him to do great things by ..is famous drop kicks were sorely disappointed. P. R. A.

CORNELL IN A RALLY WINS FROM WASHINGTON AND LEE

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 13.—With the score 21 to 7 against them, in the second period, Cornell came back at Washington and Lee today and when the final whistle blew, led the plucky Virginians by 40 to 21. The game, although loosely played by Cornell in the first period, was full of thrills.

Washington and Lee got the jump on the Ithacans in the first period, when Collins fumbled the first kick-off and Washington and Lee recovered the ball on Cornell's 15-yard line. Bagley and John Barrett executed two forward passes, resulting in a touchdown.

FINALS TO BE PLAYED MONDAY

In Raleigh Country Club Tennis Championship Series.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 13.—The annual tennis tournament at the Raleigh Country club has developed to the point that the finals will be played Monday afternoon by J. B. Cheshire, Jr., and Robert Winston. Cheshire defeated James McKimmon Friday afternoon and Winston defeated Mr. Blanton some days ago. It is expected that the Cheshire-Winston match will be especially close and interesting. The play involves the award of the championship loving cup that is to be played for each year and the name of the winner engraved.

CRAIG FEATURED LARGELY IN NAVY'C VICTORY OVER COLBY

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—The navy football team were forced to extend themselves to the utmost to win from Colby College today, 28 to 14. Craig, who succeeded Miles, the Navy captain, in the first period, figured largely in the victory. His 60-yard run for the second touchdown featured. Cawley did the best offensive work for Colby, scoring a touchdown and kicking the two goals. The visitors were slightly outweighed, but Navy was weak in the line and still showed the need of better tackling.

VANDERBILT CAPTURES CONTEST FROM AUBURN

Breaks Plainsmen's Supremacy in Southern Football.

Tennesseeans Outclassed the Alabamans in Every Stage of the Game. May Decide Southern Title. Score 17 to 0.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 13.—Auburn's all but undisputed reign of the past two years over Southern gridirons was brought to a sudden close here today, when eleven husky young athletes wearing the gold and black of Vanderbilt upset recent football traditions and sent the Alabama Plainsmen down to defeat by the decisive score of 17 to 0. Not in two years had the Auburn line been crossed and many wagers had been made that today it would go unscathed. But Vanderbilt, suffering under the sting of the crushing defeat administered by Virginia a week ago, went into the game with a spirit that was not to be denied. The men from Tennessee outclassed their Alabama rivals in all that goes to make up the modern game of football. They had the speed, the stamina, the skill and the heart. Auburn had the heart, too, and no beaten cause was ever more stubbornly upheld than was the dying prestige of the men of the plains. But the old Auburn machine was not working with its usual smoothness. The old smash and power was lacking.

The plainsmen resorted to forward passing, and executed some beautiful overhead plays for splendid gains, but threatened the Vanderbilt goal only once. Then they worked the ball down to within a yard or two of the black and gold line only to lose it on downs. The power to push it across, the power that for years had kept Auburn at the top of the heap, was not there.

With Georgia and Georgia Tech playing a tie game, in Atlanta today, the game between Vanderbilt and Auburn was looked upon as practically deciding football supremacy in the territory of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association. This association does not include Virginia. Auburn already had defeated Georgia, but has yet to play Tech.

Gallaudet Easy For Wake Forest Eleven

SCORE 28 TO 6 IN LAST GAME OF SEASON ON BAPTIST GROUNDS. WAKE FOREST SCORED IN EVERY QUARTER.

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 13.—Wake Forest defeated Gallaudet with ease today, 28 to 6, in the last game of the season on the home grounds. The Baptists scored in every quarter, using the forward pass twice to cross Gallaudet's goal line, and straight line bucks twice. Gallaudet's lone score came in the second quarter when Classem went through the line for a touchdown. Gallaudet really played a better game than the score shows, for they had a wonderful drive in their back field.

Classem, their full back, and Marshall, halfback, pierced the Baptist line again and again for substantial gains, the Baptist line crumbling before their attack. Wake Forest rallied whenever they threatened and only once were they able to cross the goal line. The outstanding feature of the game was the playing of Billings, the Baptist quarterback. He completely outgeneraled the Gallaudet eleven and his work on the offensive was the best of his career.

PRIZES FOR OCTOBER.

Winners in Competition of New Hanover Fishing Club Announced.

The contest committee of the New Hanover Fishing Club announces the results of the October channel bass competition—the last of the monthly contests for the 1915 fishing season—as follows

First prize, 200 yards line donated by Wilmington Hardware Company, won by Rev. H. W. Koelling, 35-pound fish caught at Mason's Inlet October 5th.

Second prize, pair pigskin trousers, donated by Geo. W. Penny, won by Mr. Ed Boushee, 34-pound fish caught at Mason's Inlet October 23rd.

Third prize, sack of flour donated by Love & Woody, won by Mr. Albert Solomon with 19-pound fish caught at the Seashore Pier October 3rd.

This is the last of the monthly competitions until next spring. Remaining now are only the season contests to be decided, and with the exception of the trout class the leaders in the different competitions are hardly likely to be displaced. However, in the trout class there is at the present time only one entry, and that a one-pound fish. Some big trout are said to be running now, and the one-pound fish will hardly stand up against the larger fish that ought to be captured this month. There are two prizes in the trout class, the first a Heddon favorite split bamboo bait casting rod and the second 200 yards of 15-thread linen line.

Carolina Defeats Davidson Eleven

BLACK SCORED ONLY TOUCHDOWN IN FINALS—LONG, TANDY AND M'DONALD FEATURED FOR CAROLINA

Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 13.—The University of North Carolina eleven overwhelmed Davidson College here this afternoon defeating the Presbyterians 41 to 6. The superior weight of the University team was evident at all stages of the game. In the final period Quarterback Long, of Carolina, caught a punt and furnished the spectacular feature of the game when he eluded the entire Davidson squad and ran 70 yards for Carolina's final touchdown. Tandy, Carolina's center, kicked five goals during the game. McDonald scored four of Carolina's touchdowns. Black scored Davidson's only touchdown in the finals with a four-yard plunge through center.

GOLDSBORO AND RALEIGH BOTH CLAIM CHAMPIONSHIP

Wayne City Surprised That State Capital Should Make Claim.

(By Emmett R. Brown.)

Goldsboro, N. C., Nov. 13.—According to the rules and regulations that govern the State championship the Goldsboro high school football team are the champions of Eastern North Carolina for the season of 1915, and no doubt will hold their own in the championship series which will be arranged by the Chapel Hill authorities, and from present indications, it now appears that Charlotte and Goldsboro will battle for the State championship title.

By defeating Kinston, at Kinston yesterday, 7 to 0, the Goldsboro team captured their fourth victory of the season, with not a single defeat to their credit, and have won two of their victories on foreign gridirons.

There was considerable surprise manifested in this city when it was learned Raleigh had defeated the Wilmington team, as it was generally conceded by all who had seen the two teams play, that Wilmington was the stronger of the two.

Another surprise was also sprung here when it was learned that the Raleigh High school not only claimed the championship of Eastern North Carolina but they published the pictures of the team as the champions of Eastern North Carolina. Goldsboro won from Raleigh 7 to 0 at the beginning of the season and has the best average of any high school in the State, except Charlotte, the champions of Western North Carolina. The person that published the picture of the Raleigh High School, as champions of the State, must have forgotten the game between Raleigh and Goldsboro or else they just thought they were champions by their records in previous years. Raleigh is not champions, but Goldsboro ought to be, according to the rules that govern the championship of the State. The rules read, that any high school team winning three high school games or the best three out of four high school games is eligible to try for the championship of the State.

Goldsboro has fulfilled the requirements but Raleigh has not. Raleigh has only won two high school games as Warrenton school is a preparatory school, but there will be a meeting of representatives from the University who will decide upon who are the champions of North Carolina.

HARVARD BEAT BROWN WITH TEAM OF SECOND-STRING MEN.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13.—Harvard today disposed of Brown 16 to 7 without spending any of the strength saved for the rejuvenated Yale team in the big game of the season to be played next Saturday. The Crimson eleven was one of second-string men with a single exception. Brown presented a powerful offense in which the serpentine runs of Pollard, a negro, and the lunging advances of Andrews were most important. The Harvard team was unable to make progress consistently through the Brown line.

Pimples and Skin Eruptions Danger Signs of Bad Blood

It May Mean Eczema, Scrofula—The First Sign of Inherited Blood Disease

Pimples, scaly itching skin, rashes, burning sensations and Scrofula denote with unfailing certainty a debilitated, weakened and impure state of the blood. The trouble may have been in your blood from birth, but no matter how you were infected, you must treat it through the blood. It is a blood disease. You must use S. S. S., the standard blood tonic for 50 years, if you expect certain relief. For purifying the system, nothing is equal to it. The action of S. S. S. is to cleanse the blood. It soaks through the system direct to the seat of the trouble—acting as an antidote to neutralize the blood poisons. It revitalizes the red blood corpuscles, increases the flow so that the blood can properly perform its physical work. The dull sluggish feeling leaves you—the complexion clears up. Even long standing cases respond promptly. But you must take S. S. S. Drugs and substitutes won't do. Get S. S. S. from your druggist. If yours is a special case and you need expert advice, write to S. S. S. Co., Atlanta, Ga.

DODGE BROTHERS ROADSTER

It has enjoyed an extraordinary demand because it embodies those qualities which make a roadster desirable.

You look for lightness—and the weight of this car is only 2150 pounds.

You look for strength—and a glance shows you how substantial it is.

You want seats so wide and deep that two passengers can lounge in perfect comfort—and you have them.

You expect grace and beauty—and you will search in vain for a line or a curve that is not beautiful.

You want plenty of storage space—and you find room under the rear deck for all the luggage two would wish to carry.

In ten months more than thirty million dollars worth of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars have been bought by the American people.

The motor is 30-35 horsepower

The price of the Touring Car or Roadster, complete, is $785 (f. o. b. Detroit)

The price of the Winter Touring Car or Roadster, complete, including regular mohair top, is $950 (f. o. b. Detroit)

TOP O' THE MORNING

They tell me that down in the vilest dens
Of the city's crime and muck,
There are men with the heart of angels,
Doing the angels' work:
That they win back the lost and the strayed,
That they help the weak to stand,
By the wonderful power of living words
And the help of God's right hand.
And often and over, the dear Lord knows,
I've knelt and prayed to Him
That somehow, somewhere, it would happen
That they'd find and save my Jim.

Representative Claude Kitchin says somebody is flooding his district with literature conveying ideas contrary to his in opposition to President Wilson's preparedness programme. Well, isn't that about the only way the people in the second district would know anything about the other side of the question? Fact is, Mr. Kitchin's district is reached by the mails and the people in it are getting the same kind of literature that about all of us are receiving. It is campaign literature and, inasmuch as a campaign is going on, there is nothing surprising in the fact that all of us will receive literature a plenty.

TWO GIRLS WITH A THRIFTY VISION.

The Durham Sun reminds us of "two business girls" who tired of boarding, but whether it was in Durham or some other city it makes no difference. They just became dissatisfied with the life they led in a boarding house, so they decided to lead the life of bachelor girls. They rented a little flat for about what two rooms had cost them in the city. They furnished it in a modest way, of course, and acted as cook and chambermaid in turn. They became satisfied with their lot, and when a girl becomes satisfied she becomes a feminine philosopher instead of complaining from morning till night.

Home life was really what the bachelor girls were longing for, so when they felt as if they had a home of their own they realized that they could not lay claim to it if they had no deed to it. They soon came to the conclusion that if they had a little house in the suburbs they could have their own garden and could beautify the place with flowers. What they were paying out for rent in the city would pay for a little house and seven acres of land in the suburbs, so they decided to own a home. They moved out and found that seven acres of land made all sorts of a garden and some sort of truck farm. They made the land pay for their suburban place and so they were soon possessors of a cozy home and were saving the money they made in the city. They rode to town on the cars and out again, till they got an automobile, and then they felt as if life was worth living, even in the country.

Realizing what intelligence and thrift had done for them, and that the work that most women call drudgery made their dream come true, they used their hands and their brains, and one of the girls in writing of their experience says: "We found that human labor is the highest paid element in the cost of living. We discovered that it doubles the price of a loaf of bread, so we baked our own bread. It makes a $3 hat cost $10, so we trimmed our own hats. We never paid any one for doing what we could do just as well ourselves."

We are beginning to like either one of those girls and that suburban home of theirs, but we forgot that all we can have to do with it is to point to it as the secret of thrift, the secret which enabled the bachelor girls to own a home and have money in the savings bank. Bachelor boys could do the same, but they would rather wait and get rich quick some other way. In fact, the lobsters would prefer to give the bachelor girls a run for their money.

AWAKENING THRIFT.

A new rural industry is being developed in those sections which have turned their attention to grain growing as well as cotton growing and tobacco culture. Grist and flouring mills have sprung up in various communities and in order to keep them going their owners are buying all the grain that the farmers have to sell. They do not have to look for a market. They have it.

Some of the millers are making a specialty of grinding stock feed, and so there is a market for every bushel of corn and peas produced in the country. Some farmers prefer to have their grain and peas converted into stock feed, and when they go to town they take a load and find ready sale for it, whereas there may be only a limited demand for corn. Some thrifty farmers are advertising stock feed by the car load.

There is still another aspect to it, however. Intelligent farmers are raising or buying more hogs and cattle, so they can utilize their own stock feed and convert it into more profit. If that is kept up many years throughout the South, a few little Republican papers here and there will have no reason to bemoan the absence of prosperity when it is a woeful lack of thrift that is the matter with Hannah. There can be no prosperity without thrift any more than there can be reaping without sowing.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," whether it be the whirlwind, or crops, or hard luck, or calamity or political punk that will burn at both ends and fizzle out at the middle.

It is time for us to quit saddling our thriftlessness and shiftlessness on innocent by-standers at Washington. We must make a joyful noise like we are living in the Nation's Garden Spot, instead of emitting yells as if we were held in the grip of a split log.

MR. KENLY FOR PREPAREDNESS

President John R. Kenly, of the Atlantic Coast Line, is not only for adequate preparedness for National defense, but he favors it on the broad lines suggested in an editorial in the Manufacturers' Record. The Star has endorsed that editorial on two or three occasions, and it ought to strike all the South's representatives in Congress as the most practical suggestion on preparedness yet outlined in the press. President Kenly approves it in this fashion:

"I have read the editorial on 'National Preparedness' with a great deal of interest, and regard it as a very strong and timely presentation of a subject that is of vital interest not only to the South, but to the entire country. I am gratified that you have given such wide distribution to the article, and believe that it will be read with interest and approval by the country generally."

Of course, any preparedness which leaves out the Atlantic and Gulf coasts would be absurd from a national point of view. The Manufacturers Record is for preparedness so broad that it will take in every secton of America.

GRACE & CO'S PANAMA FLEET

The fact that vessels of the Panama fleet of Messrs. W. R. Grace & Co., of New York, ply between Wilmington and Chile and Peru, will create more than ordinary interest in the San Francisco announcement that the company has bought the entire fleet of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, heretofore engaged in the Pacific and Oriental trade. The purchase consists of six steamships, the Peru, the City of Para, the San Jose, the San Juan, the Pennsylvania and the Newport.

The steamers are old but serviceable, and it is said they will be used in the increasingly extensive trade of Messrs. Grace & Co. between Atlantic, Pacific, South American, Mexican and Central American trading points. If the sale is consumated, as reported, it is said that it means that Grace & Co. will control the entire Central American trade as well as that of the west coast of South America, besides having a large share in the Mexican trade.

Messrs. Grace & Co. have an agent in Wilmington and the company's steamships using this port offer North Carolina a fine opportunity for commerce with Chile, Peru and other South American, Central American and Mexican ports. The company is having several new steamships built at Atlantic shipyards.

Fellow citizens, we face a peril or else a peril faces us—we don't know which. However, we think we see some kind of peril ahead of us and we are satisfied that when we meet it we had better be prepared so it will be as scared of us as we are of it. At present the world is full of perils and one is just as apt to come our way as not. We have a great many irons in the fire and there is no telling when we will have to stand guard over them, because they look as good to others as they do to us.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The fact that President Wilson's programme for national defense has the unqualified opposition of Colonel Roosevelt proves that it is sane and rational and practical.—New York World.

Rev. Charles L. Greaves, the pastor of the First Baptist church of Lumberton, the leading church, of the Robeson association and one of the great churches of the State, is a worthy successor of Rev. Caldwell, the superintendent the strongest lawyers of the Lumberton bar belong to this church and of the Sunday school, is a merchant prince; and there are with him many other business men who lead the commercial life of Lumberton. In fact the church embraces most of the cream of the Lumberton citizenship.—Charity and Children.

The Old Fort Sentinel brings information of the opening of the abandoned lime quarries in McDowell county. This is one of the results of the building of the Clinchfield railroad, its line running through the lime properties near Linville Falls station, where spur tracks are being put down. The Sentinel says lime from this quarry "is extensive and is based upon the excellent quality of the rock. Older citizens of this and adjoining counties will recall that the lime from this quarry was considered of the highest quality procurable a generation ago, and it was sought by exacting builders for use in their most important masonry work. And with the passing years no other lime has been found to take its place when quality was the prime consideration. Experts report that there is practically an inexhaustible supply, and now that there are railroad facilities for its transportation doubtless its market and its fame will spread far and wide. Lime from this quarry was hauled by wagon for use in the construction of the venerable court house at Morganton, a building that is a monument to good material and careful workmanship." Thus another of the ante-bellum industries of North Carolina comes again into quality. The Observer is patiently waiting the day when the modern process of treating iron ores will be applied to the iron mines of Lincoln county and the piling up of pig iron at Iron Station like so much cord wood will be once more a familiar sight to travelers on the Seaboard.—Charlotte Observer.

ALFRED NOYES AT TRINITY.

Famous English Poet Reads His Own Poems to College Students.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Trinity College, N. C., Nov. 13.—Alfred Noyes, one of the best known and most popular English poets and visiting professor of English literature at Princeton University, last evening delighted an audience of some 1,500 people in Craven Memorial Hall with readings from his own poetry.

After being introduced by President William P. Few, Mr. Noyes said that he would read what he considered representative poems, and that since most of them were lyrics, he would attempt to dramatize or elocutionize. He read nearly a dozen.

The first selection was "The Admiral's Ghost," a short poem based upon a story told Mr. Noyes by natives of Devonshire of the saying of Admiral Nelson that whether dead or alive, he would return to England's aid whenever a cry of need came.

"The Search Light," the second selection, was written after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, and is something of a protest against German atrocities, such as the execution of Edith Cavell, although Mr. Noyes explained that the poem was "strictly neutral."

The third selection, "The Battle Organ," Mr. Noyes described as an attempt at a reproduction of a London symphony. The fourth poem read was "Forty Singing Seamen."

SAYS JAPAN WOULD DO WELL IN EMULATING UNITED STATES

Japanese Minister Complimenta American Policy in China

Peking, Nov. 7. — (Correspondence of Associated Press). — An interview with the Japanese minister to China, Mr. Hioki, which a local paper reprints with credit to the Japan Times of Tokio, is especially complimentary to American policy in China and critical of the Japanese attitude. Mr. Hioki is now on leave in Japan, where he has been for several weeks recovering from an injury to his ankle sustained while the historic demands Japan made upon China were under consideration last spring.

The published interview credits Mr. Hioki with saying Japan would do well to emulate the United States in its dealings with China. "Take a leaf out of the American book," Mr. Hioki is reported to have advised his fellow countrymen. "The United States is not bent upon the acquisition of interests and rights in China, while she has done a great deal towards the cause of education in that part of the world. There are three universities managed by Americans for Chinese students. In addition, the Boxer trouble indemnity which the Washington government received from Peking is returned to China and is being appropriated to the fund for training Chinese students in America. Some 50 students are every year dispatched to America by means of this fund. In these circumstances the Chinese cannot but be impressed with deep gratitude for the American good offices, and be well disposed towards Americans."

In contrast to this American policy Mr. Hioki is credited with saying practically all negotiations conducted with the Chinese by the Japanese since the Meikii era have resulted in ill-feeling. He attributes this to the fact that the Japanese take no practical interest in the Chinese after they have completed negotiations, but rather hold them in contempt. Although anti-Japanese sentiment is believed by Mr. Hioki to be prevalent in several strata of Chinese society he is quoted as saying this feeling does not exist among the thinking classes of China, who are believed by him to be anxious to have good feeling between the two countries. Consequently Mr. Hioki concludes his interview with a statement that smooth relations are possible between Japan and China and are dependent largely upon a change in the attitude of the Japanese towards their neighboring state.

TO BUILD HOSPITAL ANNEX AS A MEMORIAL

Gift of Mr. and Mrs. James Sprunt, of Wilmington.

Will Erect Annex to James Walker Memorial for Treatment of Children and Mothers in Memory of Their Daughter.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the James Walker Memorial Hospital yesterday afternoon, Mr. James Sprunt, for himself and Mrs. James Sprunt and as the executor of the will of the late E. Payson George, proposed to the Board to build and equip an annex to the hospital building to serve as maternity ward and also as a children's hospital. The addition, which is to cost between $25,000 and $30,000, completely furnished, is to be a memorial to the deceased daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sprunt.

Mr. Kenneth Murchison, one of the leading architects of New York, presented and explained to the board a plan of the proposed building which is to consist of a spacious basement, a floor above it for the maternity ward to be divided into rooms for private patients and a large and commodious ward for charity patients. Over this will be two large wards for children which will be divided by a wide passage, one side being for boys and the other for girls.

These plans are subject to some change after Mr. Murchison has had an opportunity to carefully study a survey of the present hospital property.

After all the plans had been explained and submitted, George B. Elliott, Esq., by resolution duly seconded and adopted by the Board, offered to Mr. and Mrs. Sprunt the grateful appreciation of the Board for this generous gift which is to be "The Marion Sprunt Memorial." Mr. Samuel Bear, Jr., president of the Board, in fitting words supplemented the resolution of Mr. Elliott.

The benefit of this addition to the James Walker Memorial Hospital by reason of this magnificent gift, opening up the avenue of mercy to the innocent and suffering children, is so great that the community will feel that a new era of philanthropy has dawned, especially when this is considered in connection with the provisions made for those who are to become mothers. Surely the people of Wilmington will thoroughly appreciate the splendid thought that inspired this benefaction and will realize also that they are greatly blessed by the presence of two such wise and generous souls in their midst.

The proposal to erect the annex to the hospital is explained thoroughly in a letter from Mr. James Sprunt to Mr. Samuel Bear, Jr., president of the Board of Managers, and which was presented to the Board at its meeting yesterday afternoon. The letter from Mr Sprunt is as follows:

"November 11, 1915.

"Samuel Bear, Esq., President, James Walker Memorial Hospital.

"Dear Mr. Bear:

"In August of the year 1901 I visited with my family a so-called health resort where we were assigned apartments which we ascertained too late were infected by recent cases of scarlet fever, against the recurrence of which no precautions had been taken for the protection of subsequent occupants. Our only daughter, Marion, aged 13 years, almost immediately fell a victim to this criminal neglect and died after a very brief illness.

"For many years since then my wife and I have desired in testimony of our faith in a covenant keeping God and in loving sympathy with His suffering children, to erect in His name and as a memorial of our lamented daughter a hospital for the care of maternity cases and sick children, where their suffering might be alleviated or overcome by the employment of modern scientific appliances and expert medical treatment; and while our desire has been primarily the relief of the sufferer, it was also hoped that the whole community might be benefitted by affording our local practitioners the opportunity of studying cases which can only be properly done in a well regulated hospital, for after all a good hospital is in the highest sense an educational institution of the first order. As Dr. Osler truly says in one of his addresses, 'It makes of the hospital a college in which * * * the students slowly learn for themselves under skilled direction the phenomena of disease. It is the true method, because it is the natural one, the only one by which the physician grows in clinical wisdom after he begins practice for himself.' And in another lecture by the same distinguished authority I have read years ago, 'I wish to plead particularly for the wasted opportunities in the smaller hospitals of our large cities, and in those of more moderate size. There are in this State a score or more of hospitals with from 30 to 50 medical beds offering splendid material for good men on which to build reputations.'

"From time to time we have by costly experiments attempted to find a way for the fulfillment of our desire, and as you know we have also made overtures to your Board to that end, but the lack of your means for its support at the time in conjunction with your general hospital work has been the chief obstacle.

"Believing that the development of your splendid charity will now admit of its greater extension along the lines of our endeavor, we propose to erect as an annex to the James Walker Memorial Hospital a modern hospital for maternity and children's cases for both pay and charity patients to cost between $25,000 and $30,000, completely furnished, in line with the appliances of the best equipped institutions of the United States and with the advice of competent medical and surgical authority.

"The Institution is to be a part of your general hospital, supported and maintained under its rules and regulations modified to meet the purposes already defined, to be free from any and all political influence or control, and dedicated and restricted to the benefit of white women and children.

"More than one-third of the sum which we propose to expend in this cause has been left to James Sprunt and William H. Sprunt in trust for this specific purpose by our daughter's devoted friend, the late Edward Payson George, formerly of Wilmington. The remainder will be paid by James Sprunt and his wife, Luola Murchison Sprunt, and the annex is to be designated and known as 'The Marion Sprunt Memorial.'

"My brother-in-law, Mr. Kenneth M. Murchison, an eminent architect of New York, who drew the original plans, has kindly offered to contribute his time and talents in this cause, and I respectfully request that you will convene a meeting of your Board of Managers at your earliest convenience to discuss this matter with him and with us and inspect the plans and specifications provided for your approval.

"Very truly yours,

"JAMES SPRUNT."

The suggestion by Mr. Sprunt, in his letter, that it was hoped that the whole community might be benefitted by affording local practitioners the opportunity of studying cases which can only be properly done in a well regulated hospital, thereby bringing the hospital to its highest sense of an educational institution of the first order, was most favorably commented upon by members of the Board of Managers yesterday and it is believed that the gift will result in bringing to the institution a closer interest by the profession in Wilmington as a whole, to which end the energies of the managers of the institution have been bent for some time and that, too, not without success.

The gift also will, without a doubt, stimulate a livelier general public interest in the institution to the end that its most pressing needs now and in future may be taken care of through similar, even if smaller, benefactions.

THANKSGIVING TOURNAMENT

Three Events for Cape Fear Country Club—Mr. J. Wallace Carmichael Captain of Greens.

There will be three events in the Thanksgiving golf tournament of the Capt Fear Country Club consisting of the Men's 18-hole handicap, the men's 36-hole scratch competition, and men's 78-hole handicap sweepstakes. At the last meeting of the governing board Mr. J. Wallace Carmichael was elected captain of the greens for the ensuing year and the members of the club have learned of his election with great pleasure. He is an enthusiastic golfer, a good player and a most popular member of the club.

He has already entered upon his duties and is preparing an interesting schedule of tournaments for the coming year. The season proper will open with the usual Thanksgiving tournament which will consist of the following events:

10:15 A. M.—Men's 18-hole handicap. Open to all members of the club. The handicaps will be announced next Monday. All players who fail to post scores on the board provided for this purpose will be placed at scratch. The first prize will be a copper cup, second prize will be four balls and third prize will be two balls.

2:15 P. M.—Men's 36-hole scratch competition. Open only to those player whose scores made in the morning round are within the first 15 reported These players will play an additional 18 holes in the afternoon and the entrant reporting the lowest score without handicap for the entire 36 holes will be awarded a gold medal and title of club medalist for the season. The second prize will be three balls.

2:30 P. M.—Men's 18-hole handicap sweepstakes. Open to all players of the club. The club will donate three balls and the trance fees will be used to purchase additional ones, which will be divided as follows: First prize, 60 per cent.; second prize, 30 per cent.; third prize, 10 per cent.

MRS. MARY C. WRIGHT DEAD

Aged Woman Passed Away Yesterday Afternoon at Wrightsville Sound.

Friends will learn with deep regret of the death of Mrs. Mary Caroline Wright, widow of the late Robert H. Wright, which occurred yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock at her home on Wrightsville Sound. She was 77 years old and had been in failing health for the last six months. The funeral will be held at the residence this afternoon at 3 o'clock and the interment will be in the Giles' graveyard.

Surviving the deceased is one brother, Mr. Lewis Bill, and one sister, Mrs. Emmeline Roberts and the following daughters: Mrs. F. M. McGowan, Mrs. W. G. Dizor, Mrs. W. T Rogers and Mrs. W. A. Taylor, all of Wrightsville. They will have the sympathy of their numerous friends.

TRIAL CONTINUED

Man Charged With Assaulting Girl Heard Next Wednesday.

The case against Oscar Lawrence, the white man charged with assaulting little Daisy Robbins, was called yesterday in the Recorder's court, but on account of the fact that the little girl is still in the James Walker Memorial Hospital in a bad condition, the case was postponed until next Wednesday. Lawrence is in jail without bond.

Andrew Jackson, colored, was given three months on the county roads by the Recorder for carrying a concealed weapon and four months for an assault with deadly weapon.

Charles Edwards and LeRoy Norman, colored boys, were taxed with costs for throwing rocks and breaking the windows of a house belonging to Mrs. Kate F. Wright.

VETERANS WILL MEET.

Daughters of Confederacy Invited to Attend Meeting This Afternoon.

The regular meeting of Cape Fear Camp, United Confederate Veterans, will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the W. L. I. armory and Adjutant L. Leon requests that there be a full attendance of the members. The veterans will consider it an honor to have the Daughters of the Confederacy attend the meeting this afternoon and a cordial invitation is also extended the Sons of Veterans to be present.

Attractive Window Display.

Those passing the store of Peterson & Rulfs, No. 202 North Front street, yesterday afternoon and last night were much pleased with the attractive window display which had been arranged in one of the show windows by Mr. Lehmand Wood in celebration of the Corn and Agricultural Show. The front of a suburban home is strikingly shown by the use of ears of corn while the background is built up of corn stalks, the whole being arranged in appropriate colors. It is a real work of art.

Boys' League at Y. W. C. A.

There will be a meeting of the Boys' League at the Y. M. C. A. this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock. An address will be made by Mr. Swift M. Boatwright and special music will be rendered by the Boys' Orchestra. Also Dr. Worth will render several selections on the piano. A report will be made from the two contesting teams for new members, the Hustlers and Boosters, regarding the success they are meeting their work.

EVERYTHING IS READY FOR CORN SHOW WEEK

Exhibits Arriving and Great Enthusiasm Manifested.

Big Tents and Many Booths Being Erected—Large Crowds Expected. Fair Opens Tuesday—Some of the Exhibitors.

Efforts to make the Corn and Agricultural Show the most successful event of the kind ever held in Wilmington have so far progressed beyond the most sanguine expectations and with the opening of the show Tuesday there will be many agreeable surprises to greet the large crowds from Wilmington and the surrounding section.

The charge for admission to the Corn Show will be merely nominal, being 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children.

All day yesterday and until a late hour last night the tents were a scene of much activity getting things in readiness to place the exhibits Monday. A large force of workmen have been employed in erecting booths and exhibit stands for the great variety of agricultural products, live stock exhibits and the many local exhibits, of Sorosis, the manufacturers, and business firms that go a long way toward making the show for this season. The 20,000 feet of available space in the three large tents had been all taken yesterday, and a number had to be turned away for lack of room for their exhibits.

The work of decorating the main tent in a general way has progressed rapidly and already presents an inviting appearance. Hundreds of spectators visited the tents yesterday and were greatly surprised at the progress and the immensity of the undertaking. They predicted a big success for the Show.

Many Exhibits Arriving.

Agricultural exhibits have been arriving for the past two days and a great number are expected today and tomorrow to compete for prizes when the products are judged Tuesday, between 9 and 12 o'clock. The people in the country are manifesting great interest and the attendance upon the Fair will not only be large from the surrounding nine counties, which includes New Hanover, Brunswick, Bladen, Pender, Onslow, Columbus, Robeson, Sampson and Duplin, but a great number of them will send exhibits of both agricultural products and live stock. Arrangements to provide for the live stock were completed yesterday and this is expected to be by no means a small feature of the Show.

The work of placing the agricultural exhibits will be in progress all day Monday and up to 9 o'clock Tuesday morning when they will be judged. Those that arrive later will be placed as soon as possible. Mr. J. P. Herring, New Hanover's Farm Demonstration Agent, will have charge of these exhibits.

Many Booths Completed.

The exhibit booths in the big main tent were practically all completed last night. This includes the large space for agricultural products and the North Carolina Sorosis, the latter consisting of different booths for a kitchen, dining room, country store, fancy work, art loan, preserves, cakes and pies, and flowers; the Carolina Industrial school, Chamber of Commerce, United Farm Women, of Wrightsboro; Arts and Crafts, Health Exhibit, Amateur Florists, Masonboro and Winter Park.

Exhibitors are vieing with each other to see who will have the most attractive exhibits and booths and when the Show opens Tuesday morning it will be a scene of bustling activity, with a great flood of decorations carried out with unique precision.

Judges for Exhibits.

The following are the judges for the exhibits:

Vegetables—H. A. Rau, man from the Department, and William Gregerson. W. J. Kirkham was appointed alternate for the man from the Department.

Corn—A. K. Robertson, J. H. Jeffries and Hugh MacRae. Alternate for Mr. Robertson, H. E. Boney.

Peanuts—D. L. Gore, H. G. Welsh and N. M. McEachern.

Live Stock—W. B. McClellan, Sam J. Davis and man from the Department.

Pantry Supplies—Mrs. Henley, Mrs. Robert Ruark and Mrs. G. W. Westbrook.

Miscellaneous Exhibits—H. C. McQueen, C. E. Taylor and W. B. Cooper.

Potatoes—Man from the Department, Geo. Hutaff and A. M. Hall.

The highest yield in the Boys' Corn Club—J. A. Orrell, Addison Hewlett and J. T. Kerr.

DOGS AT THE CORN SHOW

Wilmington Fanciers Urged to Help Make Exhibit Great Success.

"The citizens of Wilmington who are the owners of dogs are earnestly requested to send their dogs to the Corn Show as it will take the united efforts of all owners of dogs to make Wilmington's first 'Bench Show' a success," said Mr. J. Edwin Bunting, chairman of the Bench Show committee, yesterday afternoon.

The dogs will be on exhibition Tuesday from 1 p. m. until 7 p. m. and each day thereafter. The "ribbons" will be awarded Wednesday and it is the earnest desire of the officers in charge of the Corn Show that this feature have as large an entry as is possible. There will be plenty of water for the dogs to drink at all times and a competent man to look after them and to receive them when sent down. All that is necessary is to have a collar and chain on them and to send them down, where they will receive the best of attention, whether they win a "ribbon" or not. Let all put together and have a large and successful "Bench Show."

NEW BROKERAGE BUSINESS

Messrs. D. H. Bryan and J. H. Bowden Form Co-Partnership.

Messrs. D. H. Bryan and J. B. Bowden, two well known young Wilmington business men, have formed a co-partnership under the firm name of Bryan & Bowden and will conduct a general wholesale and brokerage business at No. 104 Water street, the store having formerly been used by Mr. Bryan for his peanut business.

Mr. Bowden for the last five years has been a traveling salesman for Mr. E. Boushee, wholesale grocer, and previous to his employment with this firm, was with Samuel Bear & Son. Mr. Bryan was formerly with Mr. W. B. Cooper but went into the peanut business.

WORLD'S WEEK OF PRAYER

Young Men's Christian Association Will Have Exercises Each Day This Week—Programme.

The World's Week of Prayer which has been designated by the International committees of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association begins today and will be appropriately observed by the local associations. The prayer topics for each day are as follows:

Sunday—Prayer for the evangelistic mission of the association.

Monday—Prayer for the association in its relation to the Christian church.

Tuesday—Prayer for Divine help to meet the pressing problems of our day.

Wednesday—Prayer for the raising up of leaders and workers.

Thursday—Prayer for work among young men in non-Christian lands.

Friday—Prayer for association men at work among the millions of men now under arms.

Saturday—Prayer for the preservation of the International bonds among the associations of the world in the midst of the present strife.

The boys of Wilmington are invited to observe the Week of Prayer at any one of the following places: Boys' Brigade, every morning this week at 7 o'clock; Young Men's Christian Association, Boys from 12 to 15 years of age at 7:30 a. m., High School boys from 8 to 8:30 p. m. and employed boys at 7:45 p. m.; Calvary Baptist church uniting with Bladen Street Methodist church at 7:15 o'clock in Calvary church; Grace Methodist church at 7:30 a. m.

The services at the Y. M. C. A. for boys will be as follows: Intermediates and Juniors, 7:30 to 8 p. m.; High School, 8 to 8:30 a. m., and business boys rfom 7 to 7:25 p. m

TO IMPROVE PROGRAMME

Grand Theatre Starts Tomorrow Under Management of Howard & Wells.

The Grand Theatre starts tomorrow under the management of Messrs. Howard and Wells, and announcement was made yesterday that Mr. Percy W. Wells will have active management of the house and will be "on the ground" tomorrow and thereafter to cater to the wishes of the patrons.

Announcement is made elsewhere in today's Star of some of the plans the new management to give Grand patrons "a bigger and better show for the same money. The first bookings with which the regular Grand programme has been supplemented are the famous "German War Pictures," which have been booked direct from the Strand theatre, New York's largest photoplay house.

Mr. Wells stated yesterday that his entire efforts for the next few weeks would be devoted to an effort to make the programme of pictures at the Grand to a par with the Bijou, and in this connection also said they would be enabled to give patrons of the theatres a better programme with the minimum of expense incurred in handling the houses together.

The same courtesies, stated Mr. Wells, which have been extended to the clergymen of the city, as well as policemen and fireman in uniform, will be extended at the Grand. Mr. Wells wishes it stated that he is anxious to receive criticisms and suggestions from all patrons of the Grand, so that he may be in a better position to give them exactly the programme which they desire. Every suggestion will be acted upon and will be appreciated by the management, stated Mr. Wells.

Mr. Wells stated that even in the few days since taking over the Grand he had been enabled to close contracts by wire by which a better programme will be presented beginning tomorrow.

Mr. Wells stated that the Victoria would close last night, temporarily, until plans now under way for its policy and attractions have been perfected. However, he stated that Wilmington amusement lovers could rest assured that something worthwhile would be presented when it re-opens.

YOUNG GIRL SENT HOME.

Returned to Wilmington by Good Women of Fayetteville.

The following little story from the Fayetteville Observer of Saturday, full of human interest and pathos, with its dark side followed by a brighter phase, in which some good women acted the part of the Good Samaritan to save a young life when the State reached the missing link in its system of social service and therefore became supinely helpless, will be read with special interest in Wilmington:

"Our readers doubtless remember that a young girl, a child 14 years of age, was arrested in this city about two weeks ago in company with an older girl on the charge of vagrancy, and was arraigned in Recorder's court and found guilty.

"In the absence of any other offense being made known, Recorder Coox mercifully gave them the option of leaving the city or spending a term in jail. The older girl chose to leave and did so, but the younger one declared she had no money and there was nowhere she could go but to jail. The Recorder, therefore, ordered her to be confined and taken care of until some arrangement could be made to find a home for her. Accordingly she was given a berth in one of the rooms of the county jail.

"The matter coming to the attention of the ladies of the Mission Circle of the First Presbyterian church, the frail little girl, who, it is learned, was enticed from her home, was visited by a committee from the Mission Circle and interviewed. Ascertaining that her home was in Wilmington, and that she was the next youngest of a family of six children, provision was made for her to be comfortably clothed and transported back to Wilmington.

"The city officials in Wilmington were notified of their action and requested to meet the train and carry the girl to the home of her parents."

Y. M. C. A. Basketball Opens.

As preliminary practice for the men who will form the Y. M. C. A. Commercial Basketball League, whose season will open December 10th, two fast games were played Friday night. The first was between team No. 1, L. K. LeGwin, captain, and team No. 4, Milton Justice, captain. The score was 18 to 16 in favor of Team No. 1. The second game between Team No. 2, K. N. Davis, captain, and Team No. 3, W. A. Walker, Jr., captain. After playing off the tie, Team No. 2 came out victorious with a score of 10 to 8.

SUSPECTED THIEF ARRESTED.

County Officer H. Mack Godwin Turns in Several Offenders.

William Ross, colored, is in jail in default of $200 bond on a charge of breaking into the home of Mr. Valentine, at Winter Park, Wednesday afternoon and taking one gold ring and two gold watches. Ross was arrested Friday by Deputy Sheriff Kelly and the ring and one watch was recovered. He will have a hearing before Justice Harriss early this week.

County Officer H. Mack Godwin arrested three negroes yesterday, charged with selling whiskey. The negroes are Jesse Blount, Ednora Myers and Emma Brown. They are in jail in default of $200 bond and will get a hearing this week before Justice Harriss. The arrests were made on Meadow street near 11th.

MORE BURGLARS REPORTED.

Dr. J. T. Schonwald is Loser of $16 Taken from His Trousers.

Report was made yesterday to the police that a burglar had entered the home of Dr. J. T. Schonwald, No. 116 Nun street, on Friday night and secured $16 from his trousers pockets. The robbery was soon discovered and report made to the police. Sergeant Lane and Officer Gray went at once to make an investigation. The house had been entered through a window, probably left unlocked, the trousers were carried into the back yard and robbed. The thief had crawled over a bookcase on which was hanging the vest with a valuable gold watch.

To Fortify the System Against Winter Cold.

Many users of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC make it a practice to take a number of bottles in the fall to strengthen and fortify the system against the cold weather during the winter. Everyone knows the tonic effect of Quinine and Iron which this preparation contains in a tasteless and acceptable form. It purifies and enriches the blood and builds up the whole system. 50c.

BAKERY SHOP CONTESTANTS ASKED TO DONATE EXHIBIT

It is hoped that every housewife, who enters the cake and bread contest, will be public spirited enough to donate her product for the benefit of the Corn Show. Sorosis has nothing to gain and the members feel that everyone should have civic pride enough to make the fair a success. Only in that measure the fair is a success this year is the fair assured for another year, they feel and it is an educational force of which New Hanover county people should take pride.

The prizes are sufficiently enticing in usefulness, beauty and price, for any housewife to be willing to donate her cake or bread for the privilege of contesting for one or more of these attractive prizes. Those in charge hope the lady who sends an article to the Bakery Shop, will have pride enough to give the fair the benfiet of her skill.

PATRONESSES FOR CORN SHOW BALL THIS WEEK

As the time draws nearer for the Corn Show ball, one of the big events of the fair, interest increases on all sides in the preparations being made to give all who attend an enjoyable time. There will be features if interest not only to dancers but also to the spectators. One of the most interesting will be the dancing contest with the dancers in masks. The prizes to be awarded the two most expert dancers will be on display in Honnet's window all this week. Tickets will also be on sale at Honnet's. One ticket will admit a gentleman and a lady.

The patronesses of the ball are as follows: Mesdames Hugh MacRae, J. M. Solky, Walter Williamson, William Latimer, Walter Sprunt, Robert Northrop, E. A. Metts, M. A. Curtis, Jessie Wise, W. A. Wright, M. F. H. Gourveneur, Robert C. Cantwell and Charles Bidgood.

BAKERY SHOP AND KITCHEN SPECIAL AT THE CORN SHOW

Among the many attractions of the Corn Show will be that in charge of the Department of Civics and Home Economics, of which Mrs. J. G. Barrentine is chairman. This department includes the floral exhibit, the pickle and preserve exhibit, the "Bakery Shop" kitchen devices, made by boys and girls, and last, though by no means least, the Corn Show dining room.

Meals will be served every day from 12 o'clock, the menu consisting of oysters (any style), cold meats, sardines, salads, etc. There will also be each day a "Business Men's Special" hot dinner, as follows: Tuesday, roast beef or barbecue, rice, potatoes, turnips, apple pie and coffee; Wednesday, turkey dinner; Thursday, roast pork, cold slaw, potatoes, rice, apple pie and coffee. Attractive suppers will be served each evening from 5:30 to 8 o'clock, specials to be published in the daily papers. All will be served at reasonable prices.

TO OBSERVE WORLD'S WEEK OF PRAYER AT Y. M. C. A.

The vesper services at the Young Women's Christian Association this afternoon at 5 o'clock will be the first services in connection with the observance of the World's Week of prayer this week and will be in charge of the Christian Endeavor Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. There will be special music and the young women of the city are cordially invited.

The observance will be closed Saturday night with a Foreign Pageant which will be given in the gymnasium building. There will be no charge for admission and the public is invited. This will be in the form of a play in four acts and some 40 or 50 young women will take part. Life in India will be portrayed by members of the Ontonola group of Camp Fire Girls; life in South America, by the W. H. S. class of the Sunday school of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church; life in Japan by the business girls' Bible class and life in China by a group of High School girls assisted by Mrs. W. G. Robertson and Mrs. H. B. Branch.

The prologue to the pageant will be given by Mrs. W. G. James and the epilogue by Mrs. John Hall.

THEBANS OF ST. ANDREW'S ENTERTAIN GATHERING

"The Thebans," a class of young ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday school, delightfully entertained a gathering of young men Friday night in the church parlors. Many games were played and one which proved to be very interesting was the contest for the best written telegram composed of words, the first letters being the letters that make up the word "Thebans." The prize winners in the contest were, Miss Christine McDougal and Mr. Richard Thigpen, the winners for the "booby" being Miss Thelma Fillyaw and Mr. Charles Warner.

Delicious refreshments were served by the young ladies after which more games were played and at the close of the evening, Mr. Charles Wagner, made a most fitting speech thanking the young ladies for the most delightful evening of enjoyment and entertainment.

Those present were: Misses Charlotte Keen, Aline Staniand, Grace Shepherd, Julia Bethea, Sophia McRacken, Edna Lanier, Thelma Fllyaw, Rosa Badon, Pauline Underwood, Christine McDougal, Eloise Powers, Vivian Montgomery, Louise LaNier and Messrs. Harry Boone, Simon Branch, William Farmer, Charlie Jones, Everett McKelthan, Richard Thigpen, Aubrey Morse, William Vollers, Earle King, George Fowler, Charles Warner, and Mr. McCall.

LYNCHBURG WEDDING OF INTEREST IN WILMINGTON

Of much interest to the many friends of the family in Wilmington will be the following account from Wednesday's Lynchburg (Va.) News of the marriage in that city of Miss Edelweiss Richards, granddaughter of the late W. A. French and grand niece of the late George R. French:

"The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Richards on Floyd street presented a most attractive scene yesterday afternoon, when their daughter, Edelweiss, was united in marriage with Mr. Stephen French, of Fall River, Mass.

"The rooms were beautifully decorated in white and green, chiefly in graceful Southern smilax and white crysanthemums. Throughout the afternoon Fisher's orchestra played selections. As the strains of the wedding march sounded, Miss Evelyn Goode, the maid of honor, entered.

She was beautifully gowned in green brocade with tulle overdress and carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. The bride entered with her father and was met by the groom and his best man, Mr. Randiett Brock, of Patterson, N. J. The bride wore an exquisite gown of white Georgette crepe with silver trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. As the bride's pastor, Rev. Joseph B. Dunn, perfromed the impressive ceremony, the soft notes of 'Borceuse' were played as a violin solo.

"The bride has for some years resided in Lynchburg, and as a school girl greatly endeared herself to friends and associates. She graduated at the Lynchburg High school in 1913. The following September she went to Bradford Academy, Bradford, Mass, and graduated last June.

"The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. French, of Fall River, Mass. He is a progressive young business man at the head of a successful manufacturing business in Fall River.

"Mr. and Mrs. French left on the evening train for a northern trip. They will reside in Fall River. In their home will be many beautiful reminders of the love of Lynchburg friends and of a warm welcome in Fall River.

"The out-of-town guests were: Mr and Mrs. James F. French, Miss Mary Gardner, Miss Martha Horton and Mr. George Ashworth, of Fall River, and Mrs. George R. French, of Wilmington."

"AFTER ARMAGEDDON—WHAT?"

Interesting Topic for Free Lecture at Bijou This Afternoon.

Mr. T. H. Thornton, of New York, will speak at the Bijou theatre this afternoon at 3 o'clock, giving a free Bible lecture. His subject will be "After Armageddon—What?" and the assurance is given that his discourse which will deal with scripture prophecies and the present most awful warfare in history, will prove of much interest. Mr. Thornton is said to be a vigorous expositor of the Bible. He is making a lecture tour through several Southern cities, the lecture in Wilmington being given under the auspices of the local classes of the Associated Bible Students.

The lecture this afternoon, to which the public is invited, will begin promptly at 3 o'clock and will be entirely free. There will be no charge for admission and no collection.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In cool weather this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolized wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, is spread on nightly, like cold cream, and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile; every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.

LOCAL DOTS.

—It is announced that in a short time costs will be added for the collection of taxes not paid at that time. Sheriff Cowan states that he hopes that all will pay up before that time arrives.

—George Pigford, colored, arrested some time ago on a charge of stealing logs from the Chadbourn Lumber Company, was given a hearing yesterday before Justice Harriss and sent up to the Recorder's court, where he will get a hearing tomorrow.

—The city fire department was called yesterday to the home of Mrs. D. Quinlivan, No. 215 North Second street. Upon arrival the department found the chimney burning out and insisted that it be not extinguished until finished as they thought it a good time to finish the job, especially while the department was there to watch and see that no harm could come of it.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

—Mr. Jas. S. Williams has gone to Washington, D. C., on a business trip.

—Mr. E. I. Bear, who has been ill with typhoid fever for several weeks, is convalescing. His friends are hoping him an early recovery.

—Mr. C. C. King, of Marion, S. C., is spending a few days visiting his brother, Mr. B. F. King, No. 511 South Front street.

—Mr. W. T. Brown, has returned from a business and pleasure trip in the northern part of the State. He reports crops in good condition.

—Mr. Robert Sloan, who suffered a severe injury to a hand near Garland a few days ago, is rapidly improving and will soon be able to use it again.

—J. J. Adams, formerly employed in the local offices of the A. C. L. was called a few days ago to the bedside of his son, J. J. Adams, Jr., in Norfolk, Va Mr. Adams left here to take a position in the West.

So many requests have been made for the sale of fancy work on commission at the Corn Show, the ladies of Sorosis have decided to include this in their fancy work sale. The commission will be 15 per cent. This work, which is in charge of Mrs. J. O. Carr, will be found in the same booth with the exhibit, but under different management. Miss Della Cline will have charge of the exhibit. All fancy work, either for sale or exhibit, will be received on Monday between 10 o'clock p. m., and between 3 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Rev. Marshall at Seagate.

Rev. O. N. Marshall, whose family is now at Durham, has returned to the city and will preach at Seagate Baptist church, of which he was formerly pastor, until some time in December when the new pastor will arrive. Preaching services will be held this morning at 11 o'clock and this evening at 7:30. The morning subject will be "Yet Lacketh Thou One Thing" and the evening subject "Why Tempt Ye God?"

OUT OF THE GLOOM

Many a Gloomy Countenance is Wilmington Now Lightens With Happiness.

A bad back makes you gloomy.
Can't be happy with continual backache.
The aches and pains of a bad back
Are frequently due to weak kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are recommended for weak kidneys.
So Wilmington citizens testify.

W. G. A. Otersen, 710 N. Third St., Wilmington, says: "My back caused me a great deal of misery and it was almost impossible for me to walk. My kidneys got so weak that I could hardly control the kidney secretions, especially at night. I felt so tired when I got up in the morning that I could hardly drag myself around. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief and when I had finished three boxes my back was as sound as ever and my kidneys became normal. They haven't caused me any trouble now for a long time."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy — get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Otersen had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE USE OF CHRISTMAS CARDS

Never in the history of the development of social customs have Christmas Cards been so much used as they are today.

The custom is almost universal and is extending each year; a fact that is natural, when it is remembered that this is the least expensive and most delicate means of conveying our share in the sum total of Christmas happiness.

While ready made cards for this occasion are offered for sale at many places; these are not so much in demand now as those which are specially engraved. Cards for "Christmas Greeting" should express one's individual taste in as great a degree as a cordial personal greeting, and this can only be accomplished through the medium of a card engraved in accordance with your own taste in arrangement and artistic effect.

The most satisfactory results can be obtained by consulting the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., 47 Whitehall St., Atlanta, who will send samples of the very latest style—send today so that the work can be made up for you in ample time.

A WESTERN VIEW OF TRADITION

Address Delivered by Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, Before the North Carolina Literary and Historical Society, in Raleigh, November 8.

Following is the full text of the address delivered Monday night, November 8, by Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, before the North Carolina Literary and Historical Society ,at its sixteenth annual meeting in Raleigh:

Measured in miles it is a long way from California to North Carolina. Yet in these days, when one can talk by wire and even by wireless from sea to sea, such standard of measurement seems to be of the past and we must look for other ways in which to express the distances that lie between us, if in fact we are separated at all. Men are really divided by differences in sympathies and standpoint, not by miles, and I have thought that you, living in this older commonwealth of historic greatness and rich with hallowed traditions, might be interested in what may be called a western view of tradition. And perhaps we shall find that South and West are more really words of convenience than words of distinction.

No doubt you sometimes think that we are reckless of the wisdom of our forebears; while we at times have been heard to say that you live too securely in that passion for the past which makes men mellow but unmodern.

When you see the West adopting or urging such measures as presidential primaries, the election of United States Senators by popular vote, the initiative, the referendum and the recall as means supplementary to representative government you shudder, in your dignified way no doubt, at the audacity and irreverence of your crude countrymen. They must be in your eyes as far from grace as that American who visited one of the ancient temples of India. After a long journey through winding corridors of marble, he was brought to a single flickering light set in a jeweled recess in the wall. "And what is this?" said the tourist. "That, sir," replied the guide, "is the sacred fire which was lighted 2,000 years ago and never has been out." "Never been out? What nonsence! Poff! Well, the blamed thing is out now." This wild Westerner doubtless typifies those who without heed and in their hot-headed and fanatical worship of change would destroy the very light of our civilization. But let me remind you that all fanaticism is not radical. There is a fanaticism that is conservative, a reverence for things as they are that is no less destructive. Some years ago I visited a fishing village in Canada peopled by Scotchmen who had immigrated in the early part of the nineteenth century. It was a place named Ingonish in Cape Breton, a rugged spot that looks directly upon the Atlantic at its cruelest point. One day I fell into talk with a fisherman—a very model of a tawny-haired viking. He told me that from his fishing and his farming he made some $300 a year. "Why not come over into my country," I said, "where you may make that in a month?" There came over his face a look of humiliation as he replied, "No, I could not." "Why not?" I asked. "Because," said he, brushing his hand across his sea-burnt beard, "because I can neither read nor write." "And why," said I, "haven't you learned? There are schools here." Yes, there are schools, but my father could not read or write, and I would have felt that I was putting a shame upon the old man if I had learned to do something he could not do." Splendid, wasn't it! He would not do what his father could not do. Fine! Fine as the spirit of any man with a sentiment which holds him back from leading a full, rich life. Yet can you conceive a nation of such men—idolizing what has been, blind to the great vision of the future, fettered by the chains of the past, gripped and held fast in the hand of the dead, a nation of traditionalists, unable to meet the needs of a new day, serene, no doubt self-sufficient, but coming how far short of realizing that ideal of those who praise their God for that they serve his world!

I have given the two extremes; now let us return to our point of departure, and the first question to be asked is, "What are the traditions of our people?" This nation is not as it was one hundred and thirty-odd years ago when we asserted the traditional right of Anglo-Saxons to rebel against injustice. We have traveled centuries and centuries since then—measured in events, in achievements, in depth of insight into the secrets of nature, in breadth of view, in sweep of sympathy, and in the rise of ennobling hope. Physically we are today nearer to China than we were then to Ohio. Socially, industrially, commercially the wide world is almost a unit. And those thirteen states have spread across a continent to which have been gathered the peoples of the earth. We are the "heirs of all the ages." Our inheritance of tradition is greater than that of any other people, for we trace back not alone to King John signing the Magna Charta in that little stone hut by the river side, but to Brutus standing beside the slain Caesar, to Charles Martel with his battle axe raised against the advancing horde of an old-world civilization, to Martin Luther declaring his square-jawed policy of religious liberty, to Columbus in the prow of his boat crying to his disheartened crew, "Sail on, sail on, and on!" Irishman, Greek, Slav and Sicilian—all the nations of the world have poured their hopes and their history into this great melting pot, and the product will be—in fact, is—a civilization that is new in the sense that it is the blend of many, and yet is as old as the Egyptians.

Surely, the real tradition of such a people is not any one way of doing a certain thing; certainly not any set and unalterable plan of procedure in affairs, nor even any fixed phrase expressive of a general philosophy unless it comes from the universal heart of this strange new people. Why are we here? What is our purpose? These questions will give you the tradition of the American people, our supreme tradition—the one into which all others fall, and a part of which they are—the right of man to oppose injustice. There follow from this the right of man to govern himself, the right of property and to personal liberty, the right to freedom of speech, the right to make of himself all that nature will permit, the right to be one of many in creating a national life that will realize those hopes which singly could not be achieved.

Is there any other tradition so sacred as this—so much a part of ourselves—this hatred of injustice? It carries in its bosom all the past that inspires our people, and their spirit of unrest long has lighted the way for the nations of the world.

There is tradition that is of the form, and tradition that is of the substance. The West stands for the latter—not for a mere group of words or for a well-fashioned bit of governmental machinery—but for a thing that is real that has come out of our life. For the only real traditions a people have are those beliefs that have become part of us, like the good manners of a gentleman. They are really our sympathies—sympathies born of experience, subjectively they give standpoint; objectively they furnish background—a rich, deep background like that of some master of light and shade, some Rembrandt, whose picture is one great glowing mystery of darkness save in a central spot of radiant light where stands a single figure or group who hold the eye and enchant the imagination. History may give to us the one bright face to look upon, but in the deep mystery of the background the real story is told; for therein, to those who can see, are the groping multitudes feeling their way blindly toward the light of self-expression.

One-half of the world is at war today. We look with horror upon the inhumanity of human nature and say to ourselves: "Is this all that Christianity has brought? Have we made no further progress than to make possible this reversion to the days of Attila? What has become of that sweet song of the brotherhood of man? Was it but a spiritual opiate sung to deaden the soul of a brutal world? Whither has flown that sense of outrage against injustice, that men now die by the million because a prince was killed in Serbia?"

But these are the words of an unthinking despair. Surely our memories have not failed us. We must look back, look through this blinding storm of fire and see the Europe that was, and that will be again. Then there was to be seen a pillar of fire leading the multitude England trying to regain her lands for her people—Germany threatened with a transfer of political power from the few to the many—Russia slowly emerging from the middle ages with her groping Duma—France, la belle France, gentle, gracious, glorious France, living out the philosophy incorporated in the first ten lines of our own Declaration of Independence.

Europe may burn up. Her people may be blasted by bankruptcy. Her national lines may be made to follow new channels. Her industries may be buried. Her sons may fall and the blood and the brain of many an unknown Tolstoi, Beethoven, Pasteur or Darwin may fertilize her shell-furrowed fields. She may set up for a day new standards of national greatness. But these, all these, cannot destroy the passionate purpose of her people to own themselves, to find themselves and to decide for themselves what chains and sacrifices must be; these mean social life, and only the anarchist dreams of a life without restraints. But Europe knows that it may have what we Americans long ago gained, that degree of freedom in which sacrifice is made,—consciously and proudly made—for those and to those with whom we have a common interest. And this is liberty.

Now, this is a Western view of tradition; it is yours, too; it was yours first; it was your gift to us. And is it impertinent to ask, when your sensibilities are shocked at some departure from the conventional in our Western law, that you search the tradition of your own history to know in what spirit and by what method the gods of the elder days met the wrongs they wished to right? It may be that we ask too many questions; that we are unwilling to accept anything as settled; that we are curious, distrustful, and as relentlessly logical as a child.

"For what are we but creatures of the night
Led forth by day,
Who needs must falter, and with stammering steps
Spell out our paths in syllables of pain?"

There are no grown-ups in this new world of democracy.

We are trying an experiment such as the world has never seen. Here we are, so many million people at work making a living as best we can; 90,000,000 people covering half a continent—rich, respected, feared. Is that all we are? Is that why we are? To be rich, respected, feared. Or have we some part to play in working out the problems of this world? Why should one man have so much and many so little? How may the many secure a larger share in the wealth which they create without destroying individual initiative or blasting individual capacity and imagination? It was inevitable that these questons should be asked when this republic was established. Man has been struggling to have the right to ask these questions for 4,000 years; and now that he has the right to ask any question surely we may not with reason expect him to be silent. It is no answer to make that men were not asking these questions a hundred years ago. So great has been our physical endowment that until the most recent years we have been indifferent as to the share which each received of the wealth produced. We could then accept cheerfully the coldest and most logical of economic theories. But now men are wondering as to the future. There may be much of envy and more of malice in current thought; but underneath it all there is the feeling that if a nation is to have a full life it must devise methods by which its citizens shall be insured against monopoly of opportunity. This is the meaning of many policies the full philosophy of which is not generally grasped—the regulation of railroads and other public service corporations, the conservation of natural resources, the leasing of public lands and waterpowers, the control of great combinations of wealth. How these movements will eventually express themselves none can foretell, but in the process there will be some who will dogmatically contend that "Whatever is, is right," and others who will march under the red flag of revenge and expoliation. And in that day we must look for men to meet the false cry of both sides—"gentlemen unafraid" who will neither be the money-hired butlers of the rich nor power-loving panderers to the poor.

Assume the right of self-government and society becomes the scene of an heroic struggle for the realization of jistice. Take from the one strong man the right to rule and make others serve, the right to take all and hold all, the power to grant or to withhold, and you have set all men to asking, "What should I have, and what should my children have?" and with this come all the perils of innovation and the hazards of revolution.

To meet such a situation the traditionalist who believes that the last word in politics or in economics was uttered a century ago is as far from the truth as he who holds that the temporary emotion of the public is the stonecarved word from Sinai.

A railroad people are not to be controlled by oxteam theories, declaims the young enthusiast for change. An ago that dares to tell of what the stars are made; that weighs the very suns in its balances; that mocks the birds in their flight through the air, and the fish in their dart through the sea; that transforms the falling stream into fire, light and music; that embalms upon a piece of plate the tenderest tones of the human voice; that treats disease with disease, that reaches into the very grave itself and starts again the silent heart—surely such an age may be allowed to think for itself somewhat upon questions of politics. The age must be allowed to think indeed! And are we of the United States all who count in this age? If we think in the footprints of our fathers, fearful that we may "put a shame upon the old man," is that an end to the trouble? Is Europe not to speak because now her voice is silenced by the roar of guns? Unless I am greatly mistaken it is not from California or from Kansas or from Wisconsin that traditional forms and ideas are to receive their next great challenge, but from one or more of the nations now at war. It will in substance be a challenge that we prove ourselves as against them; not upon the field of battle but in the field of service to a people. The world recognizes that nations may not live upon their past but must submit themselves to the pragmatic test, and we are to be put to a test of all that we have of purpose and of ingenuity to establish the superiority of our form of government as a working scheme for giving men what they want.

Those soldiers in the field are thinking this very day of what government means, of what society is organized for, of what it can do that it has not done, of what it has done that it should not do. And they will go home with a new view of the world and of their relation to it. Kipling presented us with the picture of such a man's mind in his Chant-Pagan. A retired British Tommy, a cockney, is scorning himself because of the modest duties which he is called to fulfill and the small place he now fills in the world as compared with that he held on the South African veldt.

"Me that 'ave been what I've been,
Me that 'ave gone where I've gone,
Me that 'ave seen what I've seen—
'Ow can I ever take on
With awful old England again,
An 'houses both sides of the street,
And 'edges two sides of the lane,
And the parson an' gentry between,
An' touchin' my 'at when we meet—
Me that 'ave been what I've been?

"Me that 'ave followed my trade,
In the place where the lightnin's are made,
'Twixt the rains and the sun and the moon;
Me that lay down an' get up
Three years an' the sky for my roof—
That 'ave ridden my hunger an' thirst
Six thousand raw mile on the hoof.
With the Vaal and the orange for cup,
An' the brandwater basin for dish—
Oh, it's 'ard to be'ave as they wish,
(Too 'ard, an' a little too soon),
I'll 'ave to think over it first—
ME!

"I will arise an' get 'ence;—
I will trek South and make sure
If it's only my fancy or not
That the sunshine of England is pale,
And the breezes of England are stale,
An' there's somethin' gone small with the lot;
For I know of a sun an' a wind,
An' some plains and a mountain be'ind,
An' some graves by a barbed-wire fence;
An' a Dutchman I've fought 'oo might give Me a job were I ever inclined,
To look in, 'ard off saddle an' live
Where there's neither a road nor a tree—
But only my Maker an' me,
And I think it will kill me or cure,
So I think I will go there an' see.
Me!"

Out of the restless and awakened spirit of such men—German and Scotch and French and the others—will come conceptions and plans that we conservatives of America will be compelled to heed. For men are full of daring after war, and once their home fires are started again we may expect that these men who have served their governments will set about finding ways for their wider view of life to express itself in the disestablishment of the things that are useless and the unraising of things worth while. And who shall say that we shall not enter on that race?

The problem of government is after all the problem of human growth, a problem of soils and sunshine, wind and weather, struggle and rejoicing, tools and vision, machinery and vitality, imagination and hope. The one constant and inconstant quantity with which man must deal is man—changing, inert, impulsive, limited, sympathetic, selfish, aspiring man. His institutions, whether social or political, must come out of his wants and out of his capacities. Burbank has not yet made grapes to grow on thorns or figs on thistles. Neither has any system of government made all men wise. With our limitations such as they are we must ask not only what should be done, but what can be done. We may create a newer, sweeter world unless we give heed to its complimentary tradition that man's experience cautions him to make a new trail with care. We must curb courage and common sence. He may lay his first bricks upon the twentieth story, but not until he has made sure of the solidarity of the frame below. The real tradition of our people permits the mason to place brick upon brick wherever he finds it most convenient, safest and most economical; but he must not mistake thin air for structural steel.

Let me illustrate the thought that I would leave with you by the description of one of our western railroads. Your train sweeps across the desert like some bold knight in a joust, and when about to recklessly drive into a shear cliff it turns a graceful curve and follows up the wild meanderings of a stream until it reaches a ridge along which it finds its flinty way for many miles. At length you come face to face with a great gulf, a canyon—yawning, resounding and purple in its depths. Before you lies a path, zigzagging down the canyon's side to the very bottom, and away beyond another slighter trail climbs up upon the opposite side. Which is our way? Shall we follow the old trail? The answer comes as the train shoots out across a bridge and into a tunnel on the opposite side, coming out again upon the highlands —absolute silence in operation

The motive power of the Detroit Electric is a perfectly fluid, continuous stream of electricity. There are no explosions, no intervals between impulses, no over-powerful engine pounding away at 2000 revolutions per minute, nothing to jar and tire you, nothing to batter the mechanism and pile up heavy bills for repair, replacement, and adjustment. You'll be surprised at the distance you can ride in a Detroit Electric without the slightest fatigue. And it is the preferable automobile because of its cleanliness and freedom from the fumes and odors common to gas cars. On any day you say we'll be glad to arrange a demonstration for you.

THEATRICAL

Not even excepting the famous Floradora Sextette, has there ever been gathered together in one company such a galaxy of beautiful women as is to be seen in "The Prince of Pilsen" which comes to the Academy of Music for a matinee and night performance on Saturday, November 27. Their matchless beauty is augmented by costumes from the emporiums of Worth, of Paris; Hayden and Mme. Rhue, of New York, who were given carte blanche to dress these ladies in the latest costume creations. This special feature of the production is calculated to attract the women, and place before their eyes the very latest sartorial wrinkles.

"September Morn."

"September Morn," one of the best of the season's musical comedy offerings, comes to the Academy of Music at an early date with Carl George, Jo Taylor and a jolly crew of 50 assistant entertainers.

"September Morn" is not of the old school farce comedy but rather of the present day fun show, with an elaborate costumed and graceful, dancing, spirited and charming chorus of good-looking girls who master the big ensembles in a way that lends a general swing to the performance that is delightfully new and refreshing.

Jo Taylor, "The American Gaby Deslys," is seen in this revel of fun, songs and tangoes in a series of dances now the race, assisted by the smartest company of the season, who were the originals in the parts at the LaSalle Opera House, Chicago, where "September Morn" recently enjoyed one of the most successful runs ever recorded in that popular home of musical comedy.

"Everywoman."

One of the big features of the scenic splendors of "Everywoman," the huge dramatic spectacle, which Henry W. Savage will oqer here shortly, is a representation of the riotous revelry of a New York crowd on Broadway on New Year's Eve. To approach realism in his production Mr. Savage had Walter Burridge, his scenic artist, and George Marion, his stage director, visit the congested portion of "The Gay White Way" for the purpose of absorbing atmosphere as the clock was striking the hour at the birth of the new year. In this scene over 150 people are employed.

At the Royal Tomorrow.

Harold McGrath's most famous novel, "The Voice in the Fog," which has been read and enjoyed by millions, has been filmed in a stirring five-act drama, and comes as a big Paramount feature at the Royal tomorrow, starring that celebrated musical comedy star, Donald Brian, who makes his film debut in this production. Although Mr. Brian has been identified with the speaking stage for a number of years, and is popular throughout the country, he refused all offers to appear in pictures until recently.

In "The Voice in the Fog," Mr. Brian is seen as Thomas Webb, a young haberdasher or clerk of London, who falls heir to a title and 1,200 pounds in cash. How he loses his title, money and job, and the adventures which befall him in America are graphically told in this production, where he has the support of an all-star cast, including Ada Gleason, Frank Connor, Geo. Gebhardt, Ernest Joy, Florence Smythe and others. It is a photoplay of mystery and melodrama in which international society furnishes an interesting background and is pictured in true realism—a great story; a great star; a great production.

"Newer and Better" Grand.

And now for the "newer and better" Grand. Mr. Wells will be there and wants you to tell him just how you like it—there's big things in store for you as soon as plans can be perfected.

And in the meantime, starting a big week tomorrow, the Grand presents as its headliner one of the biggest stars in filmdom, in one of the biggest regular program features of the year. It is Edison's four-reel drama of regeneration, "The Way Back," and features the perpetual film favorite, Miriam Nesbitt, in the leading role, supported by George Wright and Frank McFlynn.

Miriam Nesbitt, whose searching insight has given such convincing impersonations of underworld characters, is given ample scope in "The Way Back" in her journeying from a rich, respectable woman to comrade of a crook and back again, carrying others to the higher life. It is not a dishing up of "dirt", but a picturization of the underworld's struggles and sorrows in a heart interest way. Mary Rider, the author of this story, is vivid because her stories come from the lips of the people portrayed.

George Wright, versatile and clever, gives realism of a high order to this feature which has the direction of the creator of remembered screen characters, Carleton King. It is in four big reels.

A great "Ham and Bud" comedy, "The Phoney Cannibals" is also on today and will give Grand patrons many a laugh where none grew before. It is a full reel of the funny antics of this comical pair. Don't forget. Give the Grand the "once-over" tomorrow.

Kerrigan at the Bijou.

The Bijou has indeed a big double-treat in store for tomorrow's big week opener, presenting that greatest of all film favorites, Jack Warren Kerrigan, in one of his biggest and most picturesque features, "A Life at Stake," with an all-star cast, including Hazel Buckham, Helen Leslie and Robert A. Myles.

The heroic personality of the popular Universal star, appears to great advantage in this thrilling and absorbing story of a man's conflict with himself when torn between revenge and a duty to humanity. The story is big, the crucial moment bigger, and the acting of Mr. Kerrigan dominant and powerful all the time. Every lover of fine human interest drama and of the splendid characterizations of this much loved actor will welcome this fine photoplay in two great reels.

Edison offers a great two-reel dramatic masterpiece, "The Great Deceit," starring that beautiful screen personality, Warda Howard, with John Lorenz. "The Great Deceit" is a soul stirring tragedy, told in a way that brings out all the strong climaxes in a startling way. It has been voted one of the strongest two-reelers in some months, and will no doubt be well received.

There is also a great L-Ko comedy on "Tears and Sunshine," featuring some of L-Ko's greatest comedy makers and some of their most beautiful women.

China's Great River.

The Yangtze kiang, or Yangtze river, is as long as the Mississippi and is far more important as a highway of commerce. From the great port of Shanghai as far inland as the important city of Hankow, a distance of 600 miles, the Yangtze is navigable for ocean going vessels. For the greater portion of this distance the river is very broad, and for some of the journey a passenger in a boat in midstream would be unable to see either shore distinctly. From Hankow to Ichang, 280 miles farther, the Yangtze is navigable for small river steamers, and from Ichang up to Pingshanhsien, nearly 1,000 miles, it is in great part navigable. Some of the passenger steamers plying between Shanghai and Hankow are exceedingly modern and comfortable. Thousands of sailing craft are seen on the river daily on a trip between these two points and numbers of huge rafts which require each a whole village to bring them and their contents to the distant market. The Yangtze has many important tributaries. One of these, the Hanho, which flows into the Yangtze at Hankow, is itself navigable for 600 miles.

The President's Title.

In spite of our traditions and our pretenses Americans dearly love a title. It's a fair guess that a larger part of the mail that goes to the White House is addressed to "His Excellency" or "His Eminence" or "His Honor." As a matter of fact his title is The President of the United States. That is title so great that the fathers decided that to add to it would be to detract from it. The fathers were wise. Taking their cue from the federal practice the constitution makers nor the statute makers of New York ever gave the chief executive of this commonwealth other title than the governor of New York. Every governor of the state has been content with that. Address him so in letter or in speech and you are right. Decorate him with an "excellency" or an "honor" and you are wrong. The governor of Massachusetts is His Excellency by warrant of the constitution of 1780, but he is the only excellency we have in America.—New York Sun.

Buffoonery in "Hamlet."

The buffoonery once tolerated in provincial theaters is illustrated in an anecdote set forth in the memoirs of Barry Sullivan. Wright, who was the first gravedigger, prepared himself to take the house by storm by having incased his person within a dozen or more waistcoats of all sorts of shapes and patterns. When about to commence the operation of digging the grave for the fair Ophelia Wright began to unwind by taking off waistcoat after waistcoat, which caused uproarious laughter among the audience. But as fast as he relieved himself of one waistcoat Paul Bedford, the second gravedigger, incased himself in the castoff vests, which increased the salvos of laughter, for as Wright was getting thinner Paul grew fatter and fatter. Wright, seeing himself outdone, kept on the remainder of the waistcoats and went on with his part quite crestfallen.

His Best.

A small boy, who had been allowed to run much in the streets, had so improved his opportunities that before he was five years old it was commonly said by the neighbors that he swore like a little pirate. Parental discipline did not avail to break him of the habit. One day when he was to visit his grandmother in the next street he was implored by his mother to behave himself properly, and especially not to indulge in bad language. He promised to try to remember. On his return at night the anxious mother asked if he had been a good boy. He replied emphatically that he had, clinching the statement by adding:

Languages.

The French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese languages (known as the "romance" languages) are offshoots of the old Latin and are to a considerable extent founded upon it, while the German and English tongues grew up quite apart from the Latin. That is why the Scandinavian, Dutch, German and English languages (which, like the peoples themselves, are closely related) are so scant in Latin words and derivations.—New York American.

Hope.

"Yes, she rejected me, but she did it in a most encouraging way."

"How was that?"

"As I went away she pointed to the footprints that I had made on the carpet and said, "The next time you come to propose to me I want you to wipe your shoes clean!"—Der Guckkasten.

China's Tea and Rice.

China has three crops of tea—the spring crop in April, the second in May and the "even flower" crop about the 1st of July. The export season is throughout the year. Three crops of rice are harvested. Export of this product is prohibited.

A Loving Couple.

"How many lumps of sugar, George?" asked the wife.

"Oh, have your own sweet way, as usual, dear," replied the husband.—Yonkers Statesman.

Fountain of Youth.

She—Old Mrs. Butterbus seems to be a fountain of youth in spite of her years. Sheba—At any rate she's always gushing.—Chaparral.

Ask your friends for advice, women for pity, strangers for charity and your relatives for nothing.—Spanish Proverb.

Circles.

Circles are things in which people move and reason.

Those who move in circles imagine that they make the world go round, and those who reason in circles are positive of it. However, a wheel is really the only thing that can move in a circle and get anywhere.

The periphery of the face makes a circle, every part of which is equally distant from a point within, called the scenter.

Society has circles, especially under its eyes. Those who move in social circles move because they are so uneasy they cannot keep still.

Marital jars and connubial pugilism influence the belief that the family circle might frequently be termed a ring with equal appropriateness.

The girl who has many graceful curves generally has a large circle of admirers.—Life.

A Prose Poem on Mackerel.

I can't overemphasize the beauty of these fish. You must see them for yourself to grasp the reason for my enthusiasm.

Examine them. Look at the shape of them.

Look at that fine, solid nose, that beautiful firm back, that powerful two blade propeller shaped tail.

Study the stripes and dots.

No two were ever seen alike. The variations are simply infinite. The flesh is fit for the gods!

What a thing of beauty a mackerel is!—New York Globe.

Grand Theatre

(UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT)

WE ARE "GETTING OUR DUCKS IN A ROW"

To give the patrons of the Grand the biggest and best photoplay program they have ever had—more and better pictures for the same money. It takes time to do this, but we are pleased to announce

OUR FIRST TREAT

We have secured, direct from a record run at the Strand, New York City's largest photoplay theatre, the famous

German War Pictures

the first and only collection of authentic war pictures that have been taken since the great struggle began, by 100 camera men of the Elko Film Corporation, stationed along the two great battle fronts.

Genuine war pictures of any kind are scarce enough and up to this time those showing the activities of the German and Austrian armies have been almost non-existent in this country. These 100 camera men have been working under the supervision of the German general staff and prints of the pictures are being sent to this country via Holland..

Mr. S. L. Rothapfel, manager of the "Strand," says "they are the most wonderful war pictures I have ever seen." The broad-minded man and woman wants to know everything. No matter what their sentiments they believe in education, they are willing to look, listen and learn. These pictures are realistic, true, but robbed, as far as possible, of war's gruesome dead and mangled bodies. They are extremely varied. Land forces, air forces, sea forces, under-sea forces and the forces (Red Cross) which collect the human ruins of it all, are vividly and perfectly shown.

The pictures come in five installments of one reel each and will be presented November 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th and 26th. As an example—the first installment gives close views of the discharge of cannon in an actual battle, and many other scenes of almost equal interest. There are for example, the crumbling walls of Lille after they had been battered with shell, the German soldiers preparing for an attack, the army occupying Brussels, an intimate picture of von Hindenburg and his staff and the Sultan of Turkey being driven through the streets of Constantinople while the way is lined with soldiers and cheering men and women.

The "Moving Picture World" said: "These pictures are so exceptional and of such real importance that they deserve a showing in every theatre catering to thinking people." So the Grand management closed the deal by wire for the first available bookings, and is, indeed glad to announce this great feature for Grand patrons in addition to the regular program.

"PEACE AT ANY PRICE"

Some Reasons Why National Security League Favors an Army and Navy for the Adequate Protection of the United States.

(Contributed).

The nation which unfolds its flag and stamps thereon the motto: "Peace at any Price" has, we fear, taken a long step towards degradation, ruin and slavery.

Some nations, perhaps, might accept it for what it means, and possibly be glad to do so, and live in touch with the nation adopting it, not forgetting the golden rule: "Love thy neighbor as thyself." Others would not, and these would have to be feared.

A number of our citizens, led by a retired politician and pro-Germans, seem to have adopted for their guidance the motto "Peace at any price," and are putting forth every energy to fix it as the paramount influence in our country. It is beautiful in theory, but now at a time when nearly all nations in the world are engaged in a struggle, such as has never been seen, it would not be considered. During the Revolutionary War, January 14, 1776, when Captain Hopkins was given command of the sloop-of-war, Alfred, of the then created United States navy, his first lieutenant, John Paul Jones, hoisted the first flag and flung it to the breeze. It bore thereon a rattlesnake and the motto, "Don't tread on me."

The motto, "Peace at any price," sounds like the voice of a weakling. The second is that of a strong man, and instinctively your heart warms to him, and you feel that you could embrace him, for you know that you are in the presence of one upon whom you could depend in time of need.

The spirit of Captain Hopkins was the dominant one of his day, and the "Peace at any price" man was denounced as a coward.

Coming down to the period of trouble between the States, when the tocsin of war sounded, the men of the North and South sprang to arms and prepared for the terrible struggle.

The world today stands in admiration of the renowned military leaders who developed on both sides, and of the magnificent fighting of our troops, which has never been surpassed.

Does any one think for one moment that the men of Revolutionary days or those of 1861-'65 would have ever accepted as their motto, "Peace at any price?"

No, not until it would have been forced upon them. At the present day all who are conversant with our country, know there is no nation in the world, of any importance, so poorly prepared to defend itself as the United States.

No well informed man can doubt for one instant that the Emperor of Germany and the military caste there, have been preparing for forty-five years for the conquest and domination of the world.

Last year they thought the opportune time had come, and launched the war which has made the world tremble. England, France and Russia are fighting for their independence today as we fought for ours over a hundred years ago. No one can foresee the future.

No one can tell whose arms may be victorious in the great struggle now pending, but this we do know, that should victory be with Germany and Austria, the German Emperor will have gone a long way towards making himself a second Napoleon and "Master of the world."

There would remain of the great nations for him to conquer only the United States and Japan.

No country has ever been so prepared for war as Germany. Every man above eighteen years of age is a trained soldier. The form of German government is as diametrically opposite to that of the United States as any two governments can be, hence the ruling powers of that country hold our government in utmost contempt.

As Germany overran Belgium, so it has tried to overrun Europe and subdue it to Prussian will and purpose.

"The two Teutonic powers have sent here their emissaries and their plotters, their spies, their forgers and their perjurers, to embarrass our government and insult our people by their conspiracies against our rights and interests, and even against our peace and safety. They have ordered men working here under the protection of our laws to desert their employment lest they incur the penalties imposed by foreign laws. They have openly tried to inspire a large class of our population with sentiments of disloyalty to our government. They have sought to poison and confuse the currents of public opinion here and to promote division and discord, in the hope of shaping the policy and the acts of the government to their liking or of paralyzing it altogether if that conspiracy failed. They have spied upon us; they have forged our passports to enable their hirelings to go safely upon their secret errands; they have spent money without stint in all their pestilent activities, and to earn their filthy wage their creatures have defamed our institutions and the highest officers of our government."

In 1901 von Edelshein, of the German general staff, wrote in his "Operations Upon the Sea:" "As a matter of fact Germany is the only great nation which is in a position to conquer the United States. England could, of course, carrying out a successful attack upon the sea, but she would not be prepared to protect her Canadian provinces, with which the Americans could compensate themselves for a total crushing defeat on the sea. None of the other great powers can provide the necessary fleet to attempt an invasion." And again he states: "With that country in particular, political friction, manifest in commercial aims, has not been lacking in recent years, and has until now been removed chiefly through acquiescence on our part. However, as this submission has its limit, the question arises as to what means we can develop to carry out our purpose with force in order to combat the encroachment of the United States upon our interests. Our main factor here is our fleet. Our battle fleet has every prospect of victoriously defeating the forces of the United States, widely dispersed over the two oceans. It is certain that after the defeat of the United States fleet the great extension of unprotected coast-line and of the powerful financial resources of that country would compel it to make peace."

Should we become involved in war with Germany, and be compelled to make peace on German terms because of that country's expressed feeling towards us, it would be bitterly humiliating, and we would be taxed billions of dollars in order to save our coast cities, such as Boston, New York, others, and perhaps our capital, Washington, from destruction, such as has befallen the beautiful cities of Belgium and France.

The amount required to increase the army and navy in order to put our country in such a state of preparedness for defense as to make any other nation pause before declaring war upon us, would be as nothing compared to the billions of dollars we would be assessed by way of tribute or indemnity should our large cities be captured. In the war of 1814 a small body of British regulars was landed on Chesapeake Bay.

They were opposed by raw American militia, unprepared for war. The latter outnumbered the regulars three to one, but were defeated, and Washington was captured and burned. This shows what may befall us.

The German Emperor and his military caste form the most powerful combination of the kind ever organized. Their influence reaches into nearly every nation on the globe. They have their emissaries and spies everywhere. The German propaganda, it is stated, has spent millions of dollars in the United States in the advancement of German interest. They play their game with a fine hand—so fine at times that one cannot see or feel it until it has clasped you by the throat. The fate of bleeding Belgium testifies to this. Who knows but what in this "Peace at any price" movement in America the German influence is not a strong element? What fine diplomatic work it would be for Germany to cultivate in the hearts of the politicians and of the growing generation of young men of our country the idea that America should not be prepared to defend itself, as is the case now, or make proper preparation for defense. Should this spirit of unpreparedness be allowed to remain in the ascendancy and our nation to drift along as it is, growing daily to be richer and more luxurious, thinking more and more only of excitement and pleasure, we may finally descend to that unfortunate frame of mind which seems to possess non-fighting China with 400,000,000 people, which has permitted little fighting bantam rooster Japan with its 52,000,000 population to reach over and take it by the throat and dictate to it what it must and must not do. And why this condition of affairs? Because China is unprepared, and will not fight, and Japan is prepared and will fight. And so it has been since the world began. The nation which will not fight has to bend its knee in suppliance to the one which will do so. Should the potent influences now at work lull us to rest and to a feeling of security in our present state of unpreparedness, and we be permited to go on as we are, without the much-needed increase of men in our army and navy, we fear that some day we may pay dearly for it.

Should Germany win it would be exceedingly dangerous for us. We quote wise counsel from Poor Richard (Benjamin Franklin): "A little neglect may breed great mischief; for want of a nail the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy—all for want of a little care about a horse-shoe nail."

Let the politicians of our country who seem to favor a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy in regard to preparation for defense beware else they awaken too late.

In the address of President Washington to Congress on December 3, 1793, he said: "I cannot recommend of our duties to the rest of the world without again pressing upon you the necessity of placing ourselves in a condition of complete defense."

"There is a rank due to the United States among nations which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it. If we desire to secure peace, one of the most powerful instruments of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war."

These words of wise counsel were uttered by the founder and father of our country over a hundred years ago. They are as true today as when first spoken. Should we not remember these words of wisdom and take heed thereof? We should, and it is our humble opinion that the advice of the secretaries of war and the navy, and of the army and navy experts should have the full endorsement of the people of the United States when presented to the coming Congress.

It behooves the people to inform the government at Washington of their desires.

There has been organized in New York "The National Security League." Its headquarters are 31 Pine Street, New York City. Its purpose may be summed up with the following statement of principles:

1. Whereas, there is no assurance that the United States will not again become involved in war;

2. And since a peaceful policy, even when supported by treaties, is not a sufficient guarantee against war, and the United States cannot safely entrust maintenance of its institutions to them;

3. And since we are not adequately prepared to maintain our national policies;

4. And since the present defenseless condition of the nation is due to the failure of Congress, not only to follow the carefuly considered plans of our naval and military advisors, but also to provide any reasonable measure for gradually putting such plans into practice; therefore, be it

5. Resolved, That until a workable plan for a world alliance has been evolved and agreed to by the principal nations, with proper guarantee of good faith, the United States must undertake adequate military preparations for its defense.

The National Security League favors an army and navy with citizen reserves which will be sufficient only for the adequate protection of the United States. It does not believe in a large standing army or in any form of militarism. It believes in preparation against war and not for war. The League is working for the following program:

1. Legislation correcting present wasteful methods of military appropriations and disbursements.

2. The adoption of a definite military policy.

3. A stronger, better balanced navy.

4. An effective mobile army.

5. An adequate National Guard, organized under the War Department.

6. The creation of an organized reserve for each branch of our military service.

"It is the purpose of the League to lay before the country the plans of defense which have been worked out by our military advisers, the General Staff of the Army, and the General Board of the Navy, and which have been approved by the successive administrations of the War and Navy Departments, and it is then our purpose to urge citizens to co-operate in insisting that Congress pay heed to their advisers and make necessary provision of the defense of the country."

At the head of this League are Hon. Joseph H. Choate and Hon. Alton B. Parker. Associated with them are other prominent and well known men.

APPEAL IN BEHALF OF THE 5,000 HOMELESS ORPHANS

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me," says the Master, who did greatly love all children. But especially did His great love enfold the friendless orphan.

And there are five thousand such homeless waifs in North Carolina outside the various homes supported by churches and fraternal orders.

Five thousand friendless and homeless children; five thousand little ones with infinite possibilities for good or for evil; five thousand immortal souls drifting where chance may lead them; right here at home in the Old North state.

A pitiful, a dreadful condition, truly, and one easily remedied if you will but lend a helping hand.

If every man, woman and child in North Carolina, who can, would contribute as a Thanksgiving offering but one day's income to the orphanage work of the state, what a princely sum would be realized, what a vast charity would be accomplished, and what a real thank offering that would be.

And North Carolinians have a special right, on this Thanksgiving Day, to offer up thanks to their God, but He will expect something more from them than a service of the lips alone.

One day's income given to the orphaned children of our State may involve some self-sacrifices.

But without self-sacrifice true happiness may not be attained in this world.

And the Recording Angel will surely heavily underscore your Thanksgiving offering to the friendless ones, if that offering involves some self-denial.

The orphanages of North Carolina are doing a wonderful work. They gather up waste material and transmute it into something of vast value to the Commonwealth.

And they do this without cost to the Commonwealth.

But now they urgently need this aid from you, for the five thousand homeless ones must not longer be without homes, or friends, or guidance, or training.

Every orphanage in the State is crowded to its fullest capacity. Their capacity must be increased, or else thousands of children now wandering the highways and byways, subject to every evil temptation the world has to offer, are lost in this world and mayhap in the next.

Hardly is there a wage-earner, man, woman or child, in this great State, who may not devote a day's earnings to this, the Master's work. Let North Carolina make this a Thanksgiving Day of historic importance. Let it be one which will open the doors of homes to little ones who now have no homes, who have no friends, who daily are learning evil and not good, and who have souls, like you, to be eternally saved or eternally damned.

If you wish to divide your Thanksgiving offering between the orphanage of your church and your fraternal order, that is your privilege.

But let not the day pass without making a thank offering to your God of something more than words alone.

Your own child, warmly clad, well nourished, guided through a tough old world by the infinite love and tenderness of a father and mother.

Some other child, just as precious to the Master, shivering in its rags on Thanksgiving morn, no food, no friends, no guidance or love.

Why, men and women of North Carolina, there are five thousand such children right here in your own great State! Can you afford NOT to deny yourself some pleasure, some luxury, even some necessity, to help the helpless become what their God and your God intended that they should become?

"Even so, it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish."

You cannot and you will not, for the Master says: "Inasmuch as ye have done i unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

So this Thanksgiving Day let's do it and make North Carolina a state where its future citizens are all given a fair chance.

Forward your contribution through your pastor or the treasurer of your lodge to the orphanage of your choice, and you will be happier for having assisted a most worthy cause.

Most respectfully,

M. L. SHIPMAN,
JAMES R. YOUNG,
JULIAN S. CARR,
ARCHIBALD JOHNSON,
HIGHT C. MOORE,
C. B. McNAIRY.

Washington, Nov. 13.—A formal order was issued today by the Postoffice epartment directing postmasters hereafter to refuse to accept parcel post packages for Germany, Austria and Hungary. The order was necessitated by the refusal of the steamship company which has been carrying this mail to accept it in future.

When you or I look upon that stretch of steel we wonder at the daring of its builders. Great men they were who boldly buil t that road—great in imagination, greater in their deeds—for they were men so great that they did not build upon a line that was without tradition. The route they followed was made by the buffalo and the elk ten thousand years ago. The bear and the deer followed it generation after generation, and after them came the trapper, and then the pioneer. It was already a trail when the railroad engineer came with transit and chain seeking a path for the great black stallion of steel.

Up beside the stream and along the ridge the track was laid. But there was no thought of following the old trail downward into the canyon. Then the spirit of the new age broke through tradition, the canyon was leaped and the mountain's heart pierced, that man might have a swifter and safer way to the Valley of Heart's Desire.

Invokes God's Reward For Pellagra Cure

Jumbo, Va.—J. H. Satterwhite writes: "I want to thank you for what you have done for me. You have cured my wife. God bless you in your work. I hope some day to see you; if I never see you I hope to meet you in heaven. God will reward you for your grand and noble work."

There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Don't delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn.

The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off, sore mouth, the lips, throat and tongue a flaming red, with mucus and choking; indigestion and nausea, either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope; get Baughn's big Free book on Pellagra and learn about the remedy for Pellagra that has at last been found. Address American Compounding Co., Box 2097 Jasper, Ala., remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.—Adv.

PENETRATION TREATMENT QUICKEST WAY TO BREAK UP DEEP COLDS

A quick and most effective remedy for colds is a preparation known as Gowans (most powerful and penetrating), which is applied externally. It is a well known fact that most cases of pneumonia and other serious forms of bronchal and lung troubles are developed from slight colds and Gowans has prevented thousands of cases of these serious illnesses by breaking up the cold in its early stages and even in advanced, serious cases of pneumonia itself. The most stubborn cases have been relieved by rubbing Gowans on the chest, under the arms and between the shoulder blades at night before going to bed and covering with a warm flannel cloth. The healing medicines penetrate to the affected parts quickly, reducing the inflamation and breaking up the congestion. Gowans is also very effective in treating all other forms of cold troubles, such as head and chest colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, inflammation, congestion, catarrh, bronchitis, asthma, etc. Try this remedy tonight. Don't accept a substitute. "Demand Gowans, because Gowans is more penetrating." At druggists in 25c, 50c and $1.00 bottles. Free sample and testimonials on request, by writing the Gowan Medical Co., Concord, N. C.

The Business Woman Chooses Her Winter Raiment

Browsing in the Ready-to-Wear Departments - What Does, and Does Not Constitute Correct Workaday Dress - After All, the Admirable Shirtwaist.

One's Office Blouse may be of Silk—but it must be Neat and Businesslike

An All-Sorts-of-Weather Coat

The Invaluable Black Evening Gown

IT is winter raiment that offers the big problem to a business woman; not spring toggery, which is not only simpler and less expensive in character, but also has its time of providing when there has been a good long period—between Christmas and Easter—for necessary "saving-up." Winter clothes, on the other hand, must be bought just when the pocketbook is at its lowest ebb—after the expenditures for the summer vacation.

Lucky the business girl whose providence of mind last season results now in several presentable garments that will tide over until a few shekels are again saved up for new wearables. It is an improvident business woman indeed who "buys as she goes," picking up raiment that appeals to her soul because it is smart—and she desires it!—and discarding it when it wears out for something new and again desirable.

This individual, though she may look invariably attractive and well-dressed, does so at a probable greater expenditure than she can really afford. After her clothes are bought there is little left for "good times," and she is constantly in a worried state of mind and a "broke" condition of finance. The provident maid buys with a long, long look ahead. And she buys carefully, selecting good materials rather than striking styles. Either may be secured for a fair outlay of money; but to obtain the two combined, a rather big price must be paid. The provident business girl keeps her eye on special sales and seizes the opportunity to buy odd sizes and "closing-out stock" models at a third of their original cost—when the improvident maid was shopping.

Having supplied herself with a good coat and a good suit at mid-season, last winter; she can afford to wait patiently, this year, for prices to come down a little. She never makes the mistake of selecting such a smart and snappy tailleur that its very snappiness will lay it on the shelf when its striking style has become passe. On the other hand, she does not buy, because they are reduced in price, homely, staid-looking styles that have not "taken" during the current season. She studies her own type and when shopping, examines only those garments that suit her type and which have a conventional, unstriking, character that will carry them safely over into another season.

Little Things Sap the Dress Allowance.

"It is the little foxes that eat the grapes"; and it is the small belongings of dress that make inroads on the business woman's allowance for clothes. Fresh collars and veils, new gloves, a pair of rubbers, a handbag to replace the shabby one, another umbrella because one's own has been mislaid or "borrowed" from the office—all these little necessities, continually cropping-up sap the very life out of the sum, patiently saved up for a new suit or a new coat. For this reason, it is much wiser to invest in a quiet, conventional tailleur of good quality and wear it two seasons, spending a liberal allowance on the "little things" which are really more important than the suit—in accomplishing a spic-span and chic ensemble.

Luxuries Not For The Small Salary.

"It would surprise you," asserted a saleswoman in a New York department store recently, "how many business girls buy silk-woven underwear and silk stockings. Of course silk stockings may be picked up very cheaply nowadays; but the cheap grades do not last any time. Silk underwear is always a luxury but many business girls declare they can't possibly be comfortable in anything else. They buy one set—all they can afford, and wash it out overnight, or Saturday night and stay in bed Sunday morning till it is dry."

Hats Are Important—And a Problem.

A really smart hat does cost such a lot of money—unless one has the millinery knack at one's finger-ends. It is a wise business girl who spends a few evenings at a millinery school, learning the professional manner of covering hat frames, manipulating materials and tying bows in the approved way. It is hat shapes that one pays exorbitantly for nowadays. Trimmings are a minor consideration, and the knowledge how to cover a buckram frame with velvet, or a wire frame with straw braid is invaluable. With this knowledge, the business girl, in an evening at home, can produce a hat that she would have to pay twenty dollars for in a shop. Blouses, it does not pay to make, for they may be picked up so cheaply in the shops; separate skirts also. The tailleur must of course be bought ready-made unless the business woman has a goodly salary and can afford to patronize a custom tailor. Little frocks, for the office, and for social occasions may occasionally be picked up in the shops for less than they could be made by a dressmaker. It is not wise for the busy, working woman to spend evenings over a sewing machine; but now and then an evening frock or a little silk frock for special occasions may be essayed at home—if plenty of time is allowed for its finishing and there is no wear and tear of hurried nerves.

The dainty black net and lace frock for restaurant wear, pictured, is a model that could be built at home by a girl clever with her needle—and possessed of the knack of cutting-out according to modish lines. This frock is of black satin meteor underneath. A flounce of accordeon pleated silk mull, edged with velvet ribbon is set on below the hip. Over this falls the overdress of gathered black tulle which falls from a yoke of black lace, appliqued to the tulle at the hips. The underbodice of black satin is set on a transparent yoke of flesh pink tulle, and the over-bodice of black lace has black tulle sleeves, set in with hemstitching. A sash of black velvet ribbon joins bodice and skirt.

The tailored frock for matinee days is a ready-made model of dark green cloth, with a smart jacket-bodice buttoned over a simple blouse of white satin. From the watchpocket on the coat depends a fob ribbon in black and white. In its second season this tailored suit may be made over into an office frock.

Out-of-Door Garb Simple Yet Correct.

A business woman may win—or lose—an excellent position because of her street costume. Neatness is an excellent consideration; but smart attractiveness of appearance is even more important—when a good job hangs in the balance. Smart attractiveness does not, by any means, imply ultra modishness or strikingness of costume; but it does mean well cut clothes, well worn, and accompanied by irreproachable accessories. The business girl pictured wears a not expensive ready-made suit of checked worsted, cut and trimmed modishly; a simple but becoming velvet hat, spotless white gloves and very neat footwear. Her umbrella is smoothly rolled; her handbag betokens prosperity—therefore capability on her part—nothing reveals hard economy like a rusty handbag! Her fur neckpiece is not made of costly pelt, but it is very smartly worn. Altogether she is a very up-and-going, prosperous and capable looking little business woman who will be much more likely to secure a coveted position than another woman, quite as worthy, quite as capable, who seeks it in an out-of-date, slouchily worn suit, mended silk gloves and a fur boa suitable for her grandmother in style.

An admirable day-in-and-day-out winter coat for business wear is pictured in the model of golden brown zibeline with otter collar and muff to match. This coat covers the frock completely, is easy to get into and out of, and is graceful and youthful in line, with its redingote skirt and easy fitting upper part. This business girl wears an excellent hat, too—a tricorne model of brown velvet, simply trimmed with a bead dagger. Her gloves are of tan kid, white stitched, and her neat boots have brown cloth tops. There is nothing ostentatious or tawdry about her appearance; she is neat from top to toe, and is well dressed for her work—a most attractive little figure, withal!

Year in and year out, the business woman finds nothing to improve—for office wear—on the tried and true white shirtwaist. Its style may change and its material also, but it ever remains the neatest and most practical garment for everyday wear. The waist pictured is of white crepe de chine, tucked and hemstitched.

WHIMSICAL FASHION Has Her Vagaries

WHAT would the designers of popular magazine covers do if all extreme and freakish fashions were suddenly banished from the wardrobe of woman? Three-fourths of the poster drawings that decorate magazine covers, adorn menus and dinner cards, and advertise everything from talcum powder to automobiles, take for their basis of inspiration some bizarre and striking feature of La Mode.

Pantalet stockings are a concession to the Victorian revival.

In every season's fashion there are many features which exaggerated ever so little, offer excellent material to the poster artist—and to the satirist—and it is often difficult to draw a definite line between which styles are admirable and properly conservative, and which styles sensational and bizarre.

The great trouble is that too many folk take Fashion's whimsies too seriously. There was a great holding up of horrified hands last year when skirts began to take unto themselves the brevity that reveals the shoetop—and then some! But short skirts, adopted by womankind everywhere, have proved their comfort and their attractiveness without seriously offending the high moral sense of the community.

As has been said, it does not pay to take Fashion too seriously. These abrupt style changes that disconcert the conventionally inclined, are really rather fascinating. Besides, they give many women something to think of whose minds would otherwise be empty. There is not the least harm in a pretty woman fixing herself up according to new fashion fads. Where is the fundamental difference between putting a strip of fur around the throat, and putting a strip of fur around the ankle? Neither one may be needed as a protection against cold, but custom accepts the presence of the fur collar and protests at the absurdity of fur-topped walking boots. That these boots are not nearly as attractive as ordinary boots is clearly demonstrated in the accompanying illustration; they break the long, graceful line between ankle and knee, they make the boot top-heavy and undoubtedly they catch against the skirt.

Another fashion fad that is agitating the alarmists just now is ruffled stockings. A picture of these monstrosities is given also. It is hard for even a broad-minded individual to comprehend why any woman should really want to wear anything so hideous as ruffled hosiery, with its very obvious suggestion of the pantalet; but if there are females who desire to deck their extremities out thus—to attract attention or because they believe ruffled stockings attractive—why indeed should any hue and cry be raised? The fad will pass as all other fashion fads have passed!

The other night in New York City a very well dressed young woman, alighting from a limousine in front of a fashionable New York restaurant, was set upon by a bull terrier, held in leash by a man standing on the restaurant steps. The well dressed young woman—otherwise well dressed—wore pantalets of cream white satin, gathered around her ankles and showing for at least seven inches below a wide-flaring skirt edged with fur. There were also fur anklets where the pantalets finished off, and the young woman carried the newest thing in muffs—about the size of a dinner plate in circumference. The bulldog obviously disliked those cream silk pantalets—he was one of the ultra conservative souls who rebel against freakish styles—and he showed his sentiments with such determination that the fashionably dressed young person was obliged to flee to the shelter of her limousine and seek another supping place.

The final resting place of fur seems to be the boot-top.

The very small, very severe hat with stiff brim and high, box crown is a conspicuous fashion freak of this autumn; yet the original hat, brought by a French milliner, has so set its stamp on winter millinery that half the blocked hats and velvet-covered hats in the shops have this high, stiff crown.

Another fashion freak of this year is the muffler collar in which a pretty girl looks amusingly like a comic picture of a thin, attenuated little man in the number 17 collar of a bull-necked politician. The muffler collar, whether of fur or of velvet, makes no pretense of fitting the throat. It stands up from the shoulders all around and the more completely it covers the ears, the smarter it is. Half an ordinary fur muff, lined with some stiff stuff to keep it upright around the neck, will make a stunning muffler collar—as many an economical woman is finding out.

Fur-trimmed parasols for winter use do seem a bit inconsistent—until one thinks it over, and questions: "What is the real vocation of a parasol, anyway—to keep off the sun?" One might put it this way, perhaps: "The vocation of the parasol is keeping off the sun; its avocation is expressing flirtatious sentiments without words." This being the case, why not a parasol in December as well as in May, and if a parasol, why not a fur-trimmed one? The pictured parasol of chantilly lace and beaver is an altogether fetching affair. It would not keep off the sun anyway, and is quite as charming a background indoors as it could be outdoors.

The fur-trimmed parasol of winter is a background, not a sun-shield.

Sunday Services

THE CALL TO WORSHIP

There is a difference of men in respect of worship. It is easier for some men to pray than for others. We do not know what going to church costs some men in the way of pain and sacrifice of spirit. Others long for the church-day, for the church-bell, and the church-door; they are filled with joy on Sabbath mornings because of the sanctuary with its divine music, its great revelations, its mighty prayers, and because of the soul's absorption in God, all making a succession of festival hours. What it costs another man—the appearance of worship—cannot be told. Why this difference of men? We do not know. God the Father knows. Then whether the going be a triumphal procession or a "battle to the gates" let every son of man find his way to God's house; for there the Father awaits him; and He knows, He knows.

GOVERNOR CALLS UPON PEOPLE TO GIVE THANKS

Annual Proclamation to State Issued Yesterday.

Says State is Buoyant With Hope and Looking Forward With Ennobling Faith to Greater Achievement—Charters.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 13.—That this State is buoyant with hope and looking forward with ennobling faith to greater achievement is a striking declaration by Governor Craig in his proclamation calling on the people of the State to fittingly observe Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 25. In his proclamation the Governor says:

"The earth yields another harvest. Plenty rewards toil. On field and city peace pronounces its benediction and industry is victorious Opportunities increase with progress. The quickened conscience of the time demands and creates conditions that stimulate and respond to aspirations for ampler and stronger life. The State is buoyant with hope and looks forward with ennobling faith to greater achievement. Ours is the land of inexhaustible power where honest effort is encouraged, where the rights of all men in all ranks of society are recognized and protected further than in any other land.

"Now, therefore, I, Locke Craig, Governor of the State of North Carolina, in obedience to the custom established by our fathers, and in accordance with the President of the United States, do proclaim Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of November, a day of Thanksgiving.

"I call upon all the people to observe this day by assembling in their usual places of worship to pray for strength and guidance and to give thanks to the Almighty for his blessings, and for the glorious opportunities granted to us above all people.

"According to our means we must provide for the fatherless children and widows and all who are desolate and oppressed, for if we do not we are unworthy of our own good fortune.

"Let us on this day dedicate ourselves with renewed energy to the work laid off for each of us, and call ourselves to the realization of our obligations as neighbors and citizens that we may strive with faith and earnestness for the high social order, whose law is perfect justice. Let us in humility and gratitude remember that we have been spared while the world is consumed by war. We should pray that in the lands now stricken by desolation and death, the beneficence of peace may be restored, and the power of righteousness exalted in all the earth."

New Corporations.

The following new corporations were chartered today:

The Farmville Real Estate & Investment Co., of Farmville, Pitt county, capital $100,000 authorized and $3,000 subscribed by H. L. Humphrey and others.

The Batchelor-Benson Co., of Nashville, capital $50,000 authorized and $5,000 subscribed by H. E. Benson and others for general mercantile business.

The Underwood-Kyle Co., of Fayetteville, capital $40,000 authorized and $5,000 subscribed by W. E. Kyle, J. B. Underwood and others for groceries and supplies.

A remarkable inquiry came today to the Secretary of State. It was from a Mrs. Connelly, of Boston, and wanted to know if there was living anywhere in North Carolina a man by the name of William Sweeney, who was born in Cork, Ireland. The inquiry struck the clerical force in the Department of State as entirely too much like the popular song, "Has Any One Here Seen Kelly?"

ASKED BY VIRGINIA WOMEN TO VOTE FOR SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

Congressman Jones Receives Deputation From His Home State.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Representative W. A. Jones, of Virginia, received a deputation of women at his office today who urged him to vote for the woman suffrage amendment to the Federal constitution to be reintroduced at the coming session of Congress.

The women, all from Virginia except Miss Elsie Hill, who acted as chairman, sought to convince the congressman that suffrage was stronger in his state than he realized. Miss Belle Bodeker and Mrs. Morry Lockwood appealed to him to support the amendment.

Representative Jones frankly told them that fro minvestigations in his own district he thought a great majority of the women were opposed to suffrage, but he added that he was open to proof on this point.

Delegations from other states are planning to visit their congressmen as they arrive here between now and the opening of congress.

STEAMER WITH ALL HER CREW REPORTED TO HAVE FOUNDERED

Vessel Believed to Have Been Lost in Storm in Lake Superior.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 13.—The steamer Charles A. Luck, until recently known as the City of Berlin, has been lost with all hands, according to a report that reached here today. The report has not been verified, but G. A. Tomlinson, who had chartered the steamer to carry grain from Duluth to Buffalo, said he feared the report was true.

The vessel passed the Sault on her way to Duluth last Wednesday and since then all sight of her has been lost. The conclusion has been reached by Mr. Tomlinson that she has foundered in the storm that swept the eastern end of Lake Superior this week. She had a crew of over 20 men. Captain Duncan Bute, one of the oldest navigators on the lakes, was in command.

RESERVE BANK STATEMENT

Washington, Nov. 13.—Reserve deposits in the Federal Reserve banks increased nearly $7,000,000 during the past week, according to a statement of the banks' condition November 12, issued today by the Federal Reserve Board.

How may the different denominations of the church of Christ be united in service? It has always seemed, to thinking people, that our smaller towns and communities have too many churches and too little support. Such difficulties as these, however, are now being met in a bigger and broader spirit of union than ever before.

Denominational differences have in the past been probably one of the greatest difficulties in the way of world evangelization. Until just a few years ago it actually hampered the missionaries in their efforts to spread the gospel in lands where it was not known. Now the entire world missionary field has been so divided that only one denomination is at work in its own territory. The assignment of territory in this manner has proven to be a splendid arrangement. Although to some minds this would suggest separation rather than union, a little reflection will show us that it is, after all, an arrangement of unity in love at least. For it is love that prompts the whole idea of missions.

And it also suggests union prayer. However great denominational differences may be, it is not to be supposed that any earnest Christian would pray only for the success of his own missionaries. Because of his own personal interest in such matters he may be led to think more often of the missionaries of his particular denomination, but his prayer—if in the right spirit—is for all missions.

Another point of unity amongst all the branches of the church is that of fellowship. To feel that I have a part, however small, in the great work of building Christ's Kingdom means that I am only assuming my rightful place in the brotherhood of mankind. When all men are brothers, then will the world have been evangelized.

Owing to the death struggle now being carried on in Europe, there is more or less talk, among those who are not adherents of belief and faith in Christ, that Christianity is a failure. It is neither reasonable, kind nor honest, to condemn Christianity for failure to stop the war. It is more reasonable to assume that if all those in authority over the affairs of nations in Europe had been Christians—real imitators of the example set by Christ—there would have been no war. Can you conceive the though of Jesus leading an army bent on the destruction of human life? He came not to destroy but to save. If man be a free agent, and we believe he is, he has made his own choice.

Not only abroad, but here at home as well, would the union of the religious forces mean a big gain in purifying our home and national life. If the saying that "in union there is strength" be true, then it certainly applies to our church work as well as to any other. Suppose our city should have a Church Union, or a Federation of Churches, is it reasonable to suppose that no more church work would be done than if there was no such organization? It would be quite safe to say that it would act as a spur to all live Christians, and more workers would be continually coming to the front. The injection of more religion into commercial and political life would become an easier matter. There is nearly always some moral disease in a community that can be cured if enough right thinking people turn their attention to it. And what more powerful force could we bring to bear than the united churches?

For all branches of the Christian church to be bonded together in union, real and undivisable, is the ideal condition which all earnest members should strive and pray for.

When Jesus * * * * * gathered the first disciples around him he made them one united band. He taught them to love one another and again and again he pleaded with them not to quarrel or be divided. When he had them with him for his last counsel before his death he gave them a new commandment which was simply that they were to be bound together by such love that the world would know that they were His disciples. To crown all he had them with him when they overheard his great prayer for their unity and the unity of all who in later ages should come to believe on him.—Sunday School Times.

God's people are united to each other and to God, and the bond which unites the whole Kingdom is one in love.—Barnes.

The church as a whole must take its commands for suffering or warfare from no other lips than Christ. —Meyer.

VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE BEATS CLEMSON COLLEGE 6 TO 3.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13.—Only one series of concerted attacks was uncovered by Virgina Military Institute in the game here today with Clemson College. That was all that was necessary to win, for in three minutes of brilliant play the cadets swept down the field for 88 yards and a touchdown. Although the aggressor throughout the greater part of the game, Clemson lacked the punch to put the ball over the line and lost 6 to 3. Clemson's only score came in the second period when Harris kicked a goal from the 20-yard line. He missed two other easy trys for field goals. All the scoring was done in the first period.

Mt. Olive, N. C., Nov. 13.—William Anderson Grady, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Grady, died at their home here this morning about 2:30 o'clock, following some three or four days' illness with pneumonia. Interment will take place in the local cemetery tomorrow afternoon, Dr. J. W. Purcell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, conducting the funeral services.

MRS. STONER CREATES SENSATION IN WEST

Leading Newspapers Give Much Space to Lectures.

Print Long Accounts Under Big Heads, Often on Front Page, With Pictures—Throngs Hear Wilmington Woman.

Judging from the space and the prominence given in the leading newspapers all up and down the Pacific Coast country to accounts of the lectures by Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner, she has been creating a sensation since she began her series of lectures on Natural Education in the various cities in that country early in September. Incidentally, Wilmington, N. C., has come in for considerable advertising at the hands of Mrs. Stoner, for in most of the reports of her lectures, as well as in the advance announcements of her engagements, her home address is given as "Wilmington, N. C."

The newspapers of the Pacific coast cities have been printing pictures of Mrs. Stoner and of her daughter, Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr., and carrying stories from a column to two columns in length about them, under display heads, sometimes two columns wide, and frequently on the front page. A recent issue of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer carried a lengthy story of Mrs. Stoner and Winifred in a four-column sketch by Artist Morris, of "Child Marvel Whose Mother Will Lecture Here." The story included a "Few of the Things Girl Prodigy Knows at 13."

As an example of the manner in which the newspapers of the Pacific Coast states generally "cover" Mrs. Stoner's lectures, the folowing is reprinted from the Portland Oregonian:

"I don't give a whoop for a child who doesn't tell lies," said Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner, during her lecture at the Heilig Theater yesterday morning. "If a child tells lies, direct his mind in proper channels, for he has an active mind and an abundance of imagination."

"What shall I do with an impudent child?" beseeched a troubled mother. "I hate to give this back to you, but your child is just what it hears at home or elsewhere. Be polite to your children, and do not allow them to play with impudent youngsters. Truth in children is often mistaken for insolence," was the answer.

The theater was packed. Not a seat was vacant and in the audience were scores of physicians, educators, and mothers, to say nothing of the flocks of "kiddies" who came to play with "Mother Stoner." The stage was a perfect toyland, with almost every type of domestic animal toy, a typewriter, color balls, and balloons.

"You see," said the mother of the child prodigy, "I have nothing stiff. Everything is moveable, lively and educational. You may as well teach your children something of value while they play."

A bevy of "kiddies" were invited upon the stage to play with "Mother Stoner," as she taught a 3-year-old boy to write with a typewriter. They then circled about to the tune of an old-time hymn. This was an enjoyable spelling lesson. The next was a language lesson. "If you don't teach your children languages before they reach high school age, they never will learn the accent. But for a little child, French is as easy as English," advised Mrs. Stoner.

First of all, says Mrs. Stoner, children should be taught correct English. She then advocates either Esperanto or Spanish by a system of taking words of the same meaning and of similar sound, to begin with. "If," says the educator, "every mother here would teach her children English, or every German mother teach her children German, and every French mother teach her children French, and if then each would teach her 'kiddies' Esperanto, we would have an international medium."

A French lullaby, when taught by Mrs. Stoner, proved a pleasure and easy for the children, who each rocked a dolly and sang her to sleep in French. A new group of children was then summoned upon the stage, and with a delightful little fairy tale plot of a princess in a castle and an array of brave knights on little wooden horses to the rescue, Esperanto was really fun.

"Gaudeamus Igitur" was next sung and marched to. The children had little difficulty with the Latin.

Song Teaches Geography.

Perhaps the most interesting point in Mrs. Stoner's demonstration was her method of teaching geography. "London Bridge is Falling Down" was a song of the North Pole. "To the North Pole we will go, we will go, we will go," sang the kiddies, and as they sang played the game, impersonating "the sled and dog, bear, reindeer, walrus and seal," that they would find at the end of their cold journey.

Mrs. Stoner gave a few remarks on some of the mothers who make failures of their children. "The woman who has no time for her family, who scrubs and works continuously, tires out her husband and herself and children. There is another type of a mother, too, she who is always working for the church and civic welfare to the exclusion of her family, while her husband hungers and her children go wild on the street," said Mrs. Stoner. "If you can't teach your child French, or German, exchange with some one else. Do some work for a French woman and let her teach your child her language."

Teaching children colors at the very beginning is another of her plans. The number of children in a family makes no difference in regard to their training and the age of the parents has nothing to do with their intellect or physical perfection, and a mother can make her child what she desires, according to Mrs. Stoner.

Mrs. Stoner has written a number of books for the aid of mothers and educators. Her "Book of Knowledge" she uses incessantly. "Natural Education" and her book of "Facts in Jingles" are her other best aids.

EVENTS AF A WEEK IN AND ABOUT LUMBERTON

Superior Court Adjourns Term After Four Days.

Grand Secretary Woodell a Visitor —Death of Mr. S. A. L. Johnson —Weather Too Dry—Agricultural Fair.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Lumberton, N. C., Nov. 13.—Superior court, which convened Monday morning, adjourned Thursday evening for the term, much business having been disposed of, including all jail cases. Eight defendants were sentenced to the county roads to serve time ranging from six months to five years. Wingate Lawson, a white man 65 years old, was given six months in jail instead of a road sentence which he would have received but for his age. A defendant named Lovett, some time ago sent to the higher court by the recorder on charge of assault, was committed to jail to await the next term of criminal court. The case was to have been tried Thursday, a special venire having been summoned for that purpose, but on account of the absence of important witnesses it had to be postponed.

When Judge Whedbee presides over court no time is lost, the lawyers and court officers being kept busy to keep up with him. He is a great favorite with Robeson people. Judge Whedbee will hold a two weeks' civil term in December and will be succeeded in the new year by Judge F. A. Daniels, of Goldsboro, brother of the Secretary of the Navy.

Secretary Woodell in Lumberton.

Grand Secretary B. H. Woodell, of Raleigh, was a Lumberton visitor last night, a guest of Lumberton lodge I. O. O. F. He came to Lumberton from Vineland, where he attended the district meeting. Quite a number of members of the order from here attended the Vineland meeting and report a splendid trip. Lumberton went after and captured the next district meeting, which will be held some time next year. It was a great pleasure to your correspondent to meet Mr. Woodell again, for the first time in more than 20 years.

Lumberton had two visitors last Saturday whose pictures should go in the papers. They were two full grown young white women who were raised within 10 miles of town but had never before seen the place. They said their father never allowed them to go away from home, not even to Sunday school. They came bareheaded but went away wearing hats purchased, they said, with money they made picking cotton. They expressed themselves as being highly pleased with a place where they could see so many folk.

Death of Mr. S. A. L. Johnson.

The writer cannot recall having seen any account of the death of Mr. S. A. L. Johnson, of Abbottsburg, which is said to have occurred about two weeks ago. Mr. Johnson was one of the best known citizens of this section, having done extensive traveling over the Seaboard system. He was well known in Lumberton, seldom a week passing when he was in good health that he did not visit here. He had been in bad health for the past year.

The long dry spell was slightly broken this morning by a light shower. For some time the dust has been almost unbearable, not only on the streets but on the country roads everywhere. For some time the weather has been ideal, but everything has become so dry that rain is badly needed. All crops are now practically gathered, so that a few days' rain would not interfere with the farmers' work.

Register of Deeds Floyd was seen at the postoffice this morning getting two money orders cashed, both for the same amount, each being the price of a marriage license. The senders reside in other counties, but are invading Robeson to take away two of her fair daughters.

Pine Bluff to Georgetown.

John Roach left here this week for Pine Bluff, in Moore county, from which place he will accompany two Northern gentlemen down Lumber river, making the trip from Pine Bluff to Georgetown, S. C., in a boat. Two or three weeks will be required to make the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Britt returned last Sunday from their bridal trip, which embraced the large cities of the North. They are stopping for the present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Ward on North Elm street.

Since all the passenger trains are carrying express, the morning train from Charlotte has been running on better time, but was an hour off this morning.

The indications now are that a large party of Lumberton people will spend Thanksgiving in Richmond.

Mr. H. G. Folger arrived this week from Rockford, N. C., and will be associated in business with his brother, Mr. M. N. Folger, who recently opened a grocery business in one of the McIntyre stores on Chestnut street. Lumberton welcomes Mr. Folger as it does all good people.

Rate to the Corn Show.

The Seaboard offers a round trip rate of $3.40 to all who desire to visit the fair in Wilmington next week. With a good rate many Robeson people would have gone who will stay away. It is hard for Lumberton people to understand why Wilmington should not have a rate similar to those given to other towns on similar occasions.

Beginning next Wednesday evening, the 17th, at 7:30 o'clock, Rev. E. DeF. Heald, of Wilmington, will conduct a five days' series of services at Trinity Episcopal church. The public is cordially invited to attend these services.

Ira Wilkins, of Bellamy, who drew a jail sentence in the Federal court in Wilmington, this week, seems to have arranged to escape the sentence, paying a fine instead.

Sparks' circus showed in Lumberton October 20 and in Rowland, 20 miles from here, today. A few Lumberton people went over to Rowland to see the parade, etc.

Premium List Out.

The premium list for the Farm Products, Poultry and Livestock exhibit to be held here December 2, 3 and 4 is being circulated. Some fine exhibits may be expected, judging from reports received. It is to be hoped that all our people will take an active part in making the exhibit a grand success.

A party of young people from town attended a box supper at Back Swamp school house last night and report a great time.

The McDonald Drug Company has gone into the hands of a receiver, Mr. P. R. Hunt, for several months manager of the business, having been appointed temporary receiver. The business will be continued.

Mr. J. R. Kinlaw, of Howellsville township, has given it out that he will be a candidate next year for register of deeds on the Republican ticket.

The time for shooting birds in this county will be here Monday, and it is said that the supply of quail is abundant.

Messrs. Ed Tyson, of Lumberton, and Ed Tyson, of St. Pauls, met here at the Pastime theatre one night this week for the first time. They had heard of each other but that was their first meeting.

New Store Opened.

The Lumberton Bargain House, of which Mr. J .W. H. Fuchs, of Wilmington, is proprietor, was opened for business Wednesday and the manager, Mr. Merritt, expressed himself as well pleased with the opening business.

A big lot sale is to be pulled off in North Lumberton next Wednesday, at which time 35 building lots will be offered. That that is the coming section of Lumberton there is no doubt.

The ladies of the Methodist church served dinner at the court house the first five days this week, closing last night with a big oyster supper. Their efforts have been a great success and a good sum has been added to the church fund.

It looks now as though Lumberton would have a Christmas without fireworks, as the town tax, $50, is more than dealers care to invest in license to sell "noise makers."

In a preliminary contest last night, the following speakers were elected to represent the Lumberton High School in the annual State debate at the University: Robert Proctor, Ertel Carlyle, Robert Caldwell and John B. McLeod. This is the first year that the Lumberton school has entered this contest, being one of the schools in the State to hold the record of defeating their opponent each year.

CAPT. JOHN W. HARPER AT MECKLENBURG FAIR

Interesting Story on Occasion of Visit to Charlotte.

Popular Master of the Cape Fear Steamer Wilmington Receives Cordial Welcome in the Queen City

Capt. John W. Harper, known to thousands of people throughout North Carolina as the owner and master of the steamer Wilmington, plying daily between this city and Southport, has been spending the past week in the Piedmont section of the State. He spent a day or two in Charlotte and went from there to Winston-Salem to visit relatives of Mrs. Harper. On the occasion of Captain Harper's visit to the Queen City, the Charlotte Observer published the following especially interesting story of the genial Captain and his career:

"Capt. J. W. Harper, who has traveled more miles on North Carolina water than any other living nautical man, is a visitor in Charlotte today, taking in the fair and the town.

"As proprietor of the Harper Steamboat Line and as captain of the steamer that plies between Wilmington and Fort Caswell day by day, Captain Harper travels a mileage that would carry him around the world every year. For 41 years he has been pursuing this daily itinerary, so his good ship would have by this time a good start on a journey toward the moon if its pilgrimages had been successfully directed in that direction.

"For 38 of his 41 years on the Cape Fear, Captain Harper has been in charge of the vessel that annually carries 35,000 individuals on a round trip down the river and back, or vice versa. In that time he has become acquainted with thousands of people from all sections of this and other states who have had occasion to use his boat. Many lasting friendships have been formed. Many Charlotteans recall with keen pleasure their excursions down the Cape Fear on fishing expeditions. Coming to Charlotte now, Captain Harper finds himself constantly among friends. He was stopped frequently yesterday by those who wished to grasp his hand, inquire after the welfare of the Cape Fear and exchange reminiscences of days that are gone. A genial citizen is Captain Harper, of even and sunny disposition. He is a philosopher of his own kind; he has a sense of humor and a sense of proportion that enables him to get the maximum enjoyment out of life, and that enables him to appreciate properly the best in friendship and good comradeship.

"Born and reared on the shores of the Sound and not far from Carolina Beach at Jurvine Creek (sometimes called Whiskey Creek, but never by any one when in the neighborhood of any of the residents of that community) Captain Harper grew up in a historic section and throughout his life he has been journeying along coasts (or river banks) that are replete with historic interest. You must have read Mark Twain's 'Life on the Mississippi' and therefore you recall his experiences when he was learning to be a pilot; how amazed and overwhelmed he was when he first realized what being a pilot meant, how he must know every tree stump, and every fence rail, and every clump of brushes on the river route for hundreds of miles. Well, that is the way Captain Harper knows the Cape Fear. It would be a safe proposition to ask him on the darkest of nights to stop the boat at any one of the plantations that fringe the riverside.

"And the Captain is keenly appreciative of the historic backgrounds of those scenes. He will point out to you Old Brunswick, which for many years was the seat of government in North Carolina, and where several Governors had their abiding places; where in 1739 a church was built; and where the cellar of the old State House is still standing, and in which the Colonial Dames have erected a tablet; where there was rebellion against the mother country and casks of tea were flung into the water several years before it occurred to Boston that such a proceeding might prove effective. Along the river are some of the finest colonial homes in the South, one of them built in 1720.

"On this same river route is Carolina Beach, formerly a resort of considerable renown, and one which is now cherishing hopes of restoration to its former glory. Ambitious plans have been talked of, including the construction of a trolley line, but that is for the future. The time set for the launching of these plans proved inauspicious, but work is proceeding with the construction of macadam roads, which will be finished by the opening of the next season and ready for automobiles. There is talk of the erection of a hotel. A dozen neat cottages have been erected for summer occupancy. A unique three-mile railroad, with a wood-burning engine, takes the passengers from the boat pier to the beach.

"Southport is continuing to progress. One of the newest industries is a shrimp factory. The season began in August, and will last at least a month longer. It employs between 75 and 100 men. Plans are being made for canning fish, clams and oysters after the shrimp season is over. The season has thus far been good. There has been little bad weather to interfere. More than 4,000 cases, each containing two dozen cans, have been prepared and marketed.

"Midway between Wilmington and Southport is a busy industry, dealing in menhaden, otherwise known as fatbacks. These are small shad, very fat. From one barrel of fish four gallons of oil can be made, the oil selling for 40 cents a gallon. Thus far they have shipped 2,500 barrels of oil and 1,000 tons of fish scraps, which are left after the first process and are then available for the manufacture of fertilizer. These are shipped to Wilmington, Charleston and other places. The fish scraps yield a higher percentage of ammonia than almost anything except tankage and blood. This plant has been in existence 10 years and it employs seven steamers—some of them 200-ton affairs—for catching fish.

"Captain Harper says that Wilmington is coming along finely. Much cotton is being exported, despite the war. Five or six vessels leave port every week, bound for Italy, France and Germany by direct or indirect route. Not a single cargo has yet been lost by capture. The City of Savannah has made three trips to Rotterdam. There is no scarcity of freight at the Wilmington port; the scarcity is of ocean bottoms to convey it.

"The present Harper Steamboat Line has been in operation 28 years. In all the two-score years of his service, there has never been loss of life or any accident on the boats. 'Hardly a finger mashed,' said the genial skipper. And that is something of a record.

"For a few days the inland sea captain has bade farewell to the Cape Fear. Today he will journey out to the Charlotte fair, view the prize pumpkins, the cakes, the fine horses, the thoroughbred hogs, perchance the diving ladies and other attractions of the midway. Tomorrow he goes to Winston-Salem to visit relatives of Mrs. Harper—Moravians of Salem. There is every reason to believe that he will have a good time—his friends will see to that."

MILK-FED CHICKENS

PROFITABLE BIRDS.

Fowls Put in Coops and Fed on Sour Milk Fatten Readily.

Milk feeding chickens in fattening coops is profitable industry wherever buttermilk or sour skim milk can be obtained at a reasonable price—not more than 50 cents per 100 pounds, or four cents per gallon. The poultry husbandman of Clemson College recommends this especially to farm wives who have a near market for poultry of high quality.

Fattening coops are made 16 inches wide, 18 inches high and six feet long for 12 chickens. Laths are nailed one and one-half inches apart on a light frame, lengthwise on top, back and bottom, and up and down in front. If large chickens are to be fatted the front laths should be two inches apart. A trough is placed in the front of the coop and the fowls put their heads through the front laths and eat from the trough. The coops are raised about two feet from the ground and the droppings fall on the ground through the slatted bottoms. Thus the chickens are kept clean without the labor of cleaning the coops. Coops are placed outside under trees or in a well ventilated room.

A packing box may be made into a coop by removing the top and one side and nailing laths over these openings. The top then becomes the front of the coop, having the laths running up and down and the open side of the packing box becomes the slatting bottom of the coop. In making coops, allow six inches in length for each chicken so that it will have sufficient room for standing and sitting down.

Best breeds to fatten are Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, Wyandottes and Orpington and good crosses of these breeds. Leghorns do not fatten profitably unless confined when quite young.

Chickens to be milk fed are to be greased with 33 per cent Mercurial ointment to kill lice in case of laying hens. During the first day in the coops they are watered but not fed. On the second day they receive three light feeds of equal parts of corn meal, ground oats and wheat shorts, leaving a thin poridge of gruel of sour skimmed milk. The right thickness is obtained by using one pound of meal to one and one-half pounds of milk, making a mixture that will drop but will not run from the paddle or spoon. Feed the chickens lightly for four days to accustom them to the changed condition. Then feed twice daily all the mixture they will eat until they are fat. Give fresh water twice daily and put small stones in trough twice weekly.

From 14 to 18 days is the proper time for fattening chickens, and they should gain 3-4 to 1 1-2 pounds in this time. At the present price of ground grain and with butter milk at 40 cents a hundred pounds, the cost of making a pound of chicken flesh is about eight cents. Milk fed chickens bring higher prices than any other poultry meat and it will pay any one to build a few coops and fatten chickens for home use. There are good markets for them in all large cities. WEEKLY COTTON GOODS

Market Quiet in Gray Goods and Sheeting—Otherwise Strong.

New York, Nov. 14.—Cotton goods markets have been quiet in gray goods and sheetings bu steady and strong in some other divisions. The colored goods lines are in steady demand, the calls for fast colors becoming more insistent and harder to meet. Discounts on cotton duck were shortened another 2 1-2 per cent durin gthe week and many of the largest mills are sold ahead into March on roll duck of all kinds. Trade in fine and fancy cottons has been steadier and prices on fancy cottons at mill centers continue to rise, in sharp contrast with the weakness in plain fabrics. An advance in the cost of bleaching is to become effective January 1. Prints will be advanced 1-4c a yard as of November 15.

Quotations: Printcloths 28 inch 64 by 64s 3 1-2c, 64 by 60s, 3 1-4c, 38 1-2 inch 64 by 64s, 4 5-8c, brown sheetings, Southern standards, 7 1-4c to 7 1-2, denims, 9 ounce 14 1-2c ticklings 8 ounce, 12 1-2; staple ginghams 6 3-4; standard prints, 5 12c; dress ginghams 8 1-2c, nominal.

An Intimate Sketch of Our New National Park Which Is Located In the Heart of the Rocky Mountains.

Copyright, 1915, by The International Syndicate.

DURING the last few years the United States Government has opened quite a number of parks or playgrounds "for the benefit and enjoyment of the people." These tracts of land are known as National Parks, and nearly all of them are west of Denver and located in the Rockies or the Sierra Nevada mountains.

The latest addition to these parks is the one known as the Rocky Mountain Park, which was formally opened to the public on September the fourth. It consists of parts of the Colorado and Arapahoe National Forests and embraces some of the finest scenery of the West. It is the highest of all the parks in altitude as the lowest point is more than eight thousand feet above the level of the sea.

Splendid Scenic Drive.

The new pleasure ground is about seventy miles northwest of Denver and at present is reached only by automobile or stage. It is not large, being about twenty-six miles in length, eighteen miles across at the widest part and ten miles at the narrowest. The boundary is irregular on account of some of the land being taken up by homesteaders long ago and as the government did not desire to buy this land they made the boundary to suit the situation. At present there are few roads in the park, although work is progressing on the famous Fall River road with its switchback curves and wonderful scenery. This road when completed will be twenty-one and one-half miles in length, crossing a divide more than ten thousand feet high. Only a few miles have been completed so far. Part of the construction was done by convict labor, the Colorado trusties doing the work. The building of the road at present is being done by a contractor. When completed this road will take the traveller to the foot of the Munny range and through some of the most magnificent scenery in America.

Another road leads to a little resort kept by a man named Sprague. This place is famous for its fish dinners—the most delicious mountain trout being served. Mr. Sprague and his mother were among the early settlers in that part of Colorado and were honored guests at the dedication ceremonies. Mrs. Sprague is now about eighty years of age. She is known throughout that section as "Grandma Sprague," and is generally beloved. Horseback trails lead to the different beauty spots, some of which are at an elevation of eleven thousand feet. Beautiful lakes dot the pleasure ground, and it is quite the thing to leave Estes Park on horseback early in the morning, carrying lunch, and to spend the day on the shores of these picturesque waters.

Beautiful Lakes.

Lochvale is particularly entrancing with its snow covered mountain shores. Bear Lake with its glorious view of Long's Peak is a joy to the lover of the wonderful peaks of the Rockies. Odessa, away up on the mountain with its pine-lined shores, is a restful place, and beautiful, dainty Fern Lake, set like a diamond in an emerald bed, vie with each other in attraction to the mountain climber. Hundreds of streams tumble through the ravines and waterfalls, many of which are yet unnamed, can be seen through the luxuriant foliage.

The Forestry Service has filled the streams with fry and the followers of Isaac Walton will find a never-ending delight in trying their lines on the wary mountain trout. There are stringent rules as to fishing—a hook and line only being allowed. No fish caught may be sold. Uncle Sam has no patience with the "game hog," and persons breaking the hunting and fishing rules will pay a heavy fine.

The Park has been stocked with elk and deer. They were brought from Jackson's Hole near Yellowstone Park and turned into the Park only after they had been carefully dipped to prevent them from bringing any animal disease into their new home. These animals will be conserved here for the amusement of the people as no hunting will be allowed—in fact, no person will be allowed to carry firearms except by special permission, a favor next to impossible to obtain. In time it is expected that these animals will become as tame as the bears in the Yellowstone Park—the delight of the tourist. The whole place is alive with chipmunks, and when one spreads out lunch the woods fairly bristle with these nervous little striped creatures. Indeed, they become almost impudent in their efforts to secure food. A few wolves, wildcats and coyotes are still left, but they are harmless and will run at the sight of a human being. Then, too, they are only to be found in the dense forest. The Forestry Service has been gradually killing them off, as they are regarded as a menace in the national forests.

According to Secretary Mather it is the purpose of the government to build a series of Swiss chalets through the park and lease them out to proper persons who will take care of tourists who may care to spend some time in the mountains. As the area is so small it will require only a few days to visit the beauty spots, and by having a chain of chalets people may spend a day or two at each visiting the points nearest to each particular chalet and then move to the next one.

Camping Permitted.

Those who prefer camping may do so under the usual restrictions and rules of our National Parks—that they must pitch their camps on spots designated by the Superintendent of the park, put out all fires after meals and clean up camp before leaving. They must not cut trees or pull up wild flowers. Automobiles are permitted at present free of toll, but after the roads are completed a small charge will be made. The Interior Department is not overburdened with money to be used in the National Parks, and as the building of many of these roads costs from five thousand to six thousand dollars per mile, the payment of toll is important as it is used to keep the roads in repair and to build safeguards on the sides where the roads run along canyons. The rules as to speed are rigid as there are many sharp curves. As Colorado becomes a dry State after the first of January, 1916, no liquors of any kind will be sold on the government property.

Only Experienced Guides.

The most rigid rules as to guides will be enforced, and persons will not be allowed to wander out in the forests alone. Much of the park is still virgin forest, unknown except by men of the Government Forestry Service, and in order to travel through it off the beaten track one must have a knowledge of woodcraft. Experienced guides only will be allowed to take tourists into the forest—men who have authority from the superintendent.

The Government spends about $400,000.00 annually in the upkeep of our National Parks. The money is used in the building of roads and trails, in the construction and maintenance of telephone lines, and in the administration of the parks through civilian supervisors and rangers in all except the Yellowstone, where an army officer and his cavalry troop are in charge. It is expected that within the next year a civilian force of rangers will take charge of all the National Parks as General Superintendent Mark Daniels is at present working to perfect a ranger service.

Capt. Charles R. Trowbridge is the Superintendent of Rocky Mountain Park. He is a man of wide experience in this line of work, having spent several years at Hot Springs, Arkansas. Captain Trowbridge is an indefatigable worker, and the fact that the roads in the park were in such excellent condition for the opening is due to his untiring energy. His office at present is in Estes Park, a few miles from the Rocky Mountain tract. The rangers have not yet been appointed as the season for outings was practically over when the park was dedicated. It is expected, however, that everything will be in shape by next season when Rocky Mountain Park with its snow-capped peaks, its picturesque waterfalls and its charming lakes will vie with the other National Parks in offering its beauties to the tourist.

The Sacrificial Rattlesnake

One Who Knows All the Secrets

Human Sacrifice Is Still Practiced By the Tewas In New Mexico According To the Findings of a Woman Scientist Who Has Spent Many Years Among Them.

(By William Atherton Du Puy.)

THAT sacrificial snakes are gorged to the bursting with the flesh of women and babies killed for the purpose in the kivas of the Tewa Indians in New Mexico is the information that has been brought forth by Mrs. Matilda Coxe Stevenson, an eminent ethnologist long in the service of the Government.

Mrs. Stevenson when a young girl married James Stevenson, an ethnologist engaged in exploring for the Government certain Rocky Mountain regions and recording the facts with relation to the life, customs, history and religion of the natives living there.

In 1879 James Stevenson led an expedition for the Smithsonian Institution which had as its object the study of the Zuni Indians, that branch of the Pueblos which inhabits the Western portion of New Mexico. His wife accompanied him and took part in the exhaustive research which followed. James Stevenson died ten years later and his wife took up the work where he had laid it down, became a member of the Smithsonian staff and spent twenty-five years steadily at work among the New Mexican Indians. She has written many papers on the Zunis and other branches of the Pueblo stock—studies of their mythology, philosophy, their secret societies, into most of which she has been admitted, their weird religious observances. She is acknowledged as one of the nation's two best authorities on the Zuni Indians.

Secrets of the Tewas.

The secrets of this fascinating tribe being largely cleared up, Mrs. Stevenson some ten years ago turned her attention to the Tewas, cousins to the Zuni and also classed as Pueblos. The Tewas dwelt in six villages of the Rio Grande Valley of New Mexico. Some of these villages are near Santa Fe and others near Albuquerque. There are now about 1,200 Tewas where there were 6,000 three hundred years ago for, like all of their kind, they melt away in contact with the whites. But these remnants still dwell in the bleak villages of San Ildefonson, San Juan, Santa Clara, Nambre, Tesque and Hano. There they attend quite devoutly the services of the Christian missions that were long ago established and to all outward seeming are a simple, mild and plastic people with nothing in their lives that does not appear on the surface.

But throughout the Rio Grande Valley there has appeared from time to time stories of dire events which have transpired as part of the ancient secret rites of these Indians. Always there has been the element of human sacrifice in these stories. Investigations have been made that were official and otherwise.

Investigational Methods.

As a result of her long residence among the Tewas Mrs. Stevenson knew every member of the tribes personally. She was intimately acquainted with the different secret orders among them. There were, for instance, the main divisions into the winter people and the summer people, otherwise called the sun people and the ice people. There presided over each of these divisions a chief penitent or cacique. The sun people were in control during the summer and the ice people during the winter.

The present habitations of the Tewas are built on the plains and are by no means as picturesque as those of old which were grouped about a mountain top for defensive purposes. The kiva is the ceremonial chamber of the village and is usually its very center. On the mountain tops the kivas are built first and the other apartments grouped around them, the structures often being five stories high. At any rate the kiva is the secret ceremonial and sacred part of the village.

A Scientist Detective.

With this knowledge of the structure of Tewa society and with her intimate personal acquaintance, Mrs. Stevenson set about her work. The methods she pursued would, in detective parlance, be termed "roping," and consisted in cultivating individuals who knew the secrets that these might be directly revealed.

She went to one of the villages to establish a residence. She hired an Indian to build her a house. So humble are even the leading men of these tribes that she could employ for a mere pittance a cacique who would be likely to know all that she wanted to find out. He worked for months under her direction.

Many were their discussions of matters of history, customs, religion, with infinite patience one small point after another was uncovered and marked an advance toward the ultimate goal. In the end the Indian revealed enough from which to construct the whole fabric.

Confirmation of Evidence.

When Mrs. Stevenson had squeezed the whole story from one of the leading men of the tribe she diplomatically replaced him with another whom she might engage to perform some lengthy task such as planting a garden. Deliberately, step by step, was the second man led along the path that had been trod by his predecessor.

Eventually the second cacique had told his whole story to the investigator. Then was begun the tedious task of going over the same ground again with another man. Each journey required months of patience and concentration of purpose. With some men there was an absence of results. They did not know the secrets or they could not be induced to talk of them. In either case months were lost in a fruitless quest.

In the end four years had been spent in these barren and inhospitable regions in pursuit of a single fact. In that four years three wise men of the tribe had been induced to tell the whole story of the occasions upon which human beings are offered up as sacrifices and the details that accompany those ceremonies. The stories would not be considered of great value were it not that all three agree in vital particulars. Three men led to tell such stories would not have been able to unfold them with the same exactness of detail had not the facts been correct. Such is the confident belief of Mrs. Stevenson.

The Call For a Sacrifice.

According to the stories of these caciques there is today but one god to whom human sacrifice is made. This is the rattlesnake god, who must be appeased. Once in four years there must be made, and is still made, an offering of the flesh of a woman of each village or of a new-born babe. Otherwise would destruction descend upon his offending children.

When the occasion for the sacrifice arrives, the sun cacique issues his orders for the observance. He organizes his staff that is to participate in the ceremonial. The ice cacique organizes a similar staff which is given a place of equal importance. There may be six men and two women on the staffs of each of these chiefs.

The cacique of the sun people designates the individual who is to be sacrificed. This individual may be a newborn babe for the rattlesnake gods are particularly fond of the flesh of such as these. Yet the person to be sacrificed is not always a babe. More likely than not it is a woman. It is not known what are the considerations that guide the cacique in selecting the individual to be offered up.

When the choice is made the sacrificial staff of the sun cacique files forth in a ceremonial manner at dead of night. It approaches the house where it knows the person to be sacrificed may be found. The leader beats noisily upon the door until he gets a response, usually in the person of the man of the dwelling. When that Indian looks forth and sees the sacrificial procession he knows what to expect. The representative of the sun chief utters but two words. He says, "the babe," or "the woman," as the case may be.

The man who is thus called upon to give up his child or his wife says never a word. Yet these Indians are as fond of members of their families as are the best of their white neighbors. So fond are they of their children, for instance, that one is never punished. The man upon whom the supreme demand is made disappears for a moment into his dwelling and returns with the individual demanded. He gives the sacrifice over to the representative of the authority that is not to be denied, says no word but returns to his bed and his bereavement.

The Sacrificial Chamber.

In the kiva the caciques and the dignitaries of the tribe await. When the sacrifice arrives the women who take part in the ceremony prepare it for the great event. A part of this preparation is the administration of the brew from a native weed which is an effective anaesthetic which renders the sacrifice unconscious to pain.

There is a special knife with a broad, two-edged blade that is used in dismembering the body. With this knife the flesh is stripped from the muscular portions of the body, from the legs and arms and back. It is cut into long, narrow pieces.

In the end all is ready. The word is given and certain attendants disappear. They have gone into the rattlesnake chamber, a secret room the existence of which is known only to the members of the inner circle. There is a dramatic wait and eventually these attendants reappear bearing great earthen jars.

The present is the dramatic moment of the entire sacrifice. The attendants put down their jars near the remains of the sacrifice. The open-mouthed jars are turned on their sides and there emerges a squirming, wriggling mass of serpents. They are diamond-backed rattlers of the most poisonous type. They are ravenous from having been kept for months without food.

The snakes hiss and coil and strike out into the light that blinds them. They are not dangerous for their fangs have been removed. The Tewas are not charmers of rattlesnakes as are their cousins, the Hopis, so they remove the fangs. But the instinct to fight still remains and the rattlers set their tails to buzzing and strike right and left. There are scores of them and their clamor fills the closely shuttered kiva.

When the Snakes Eat Human Flesh.

But in the end they find the food that has been prepared for them. In their extreme hunger they fall upon it. The snake is a creature that bolts its food whole. It may not gnaw a bone nor may it chew that which it would swallow. It covers a mouthful with saliva and gulps it. The Indians know these habits of eating and have prepared the flesh of the sacrifice accordingly.

Eventually all have gorged themselves. The witnesses of the sacrifice sit blinking in the dim light until the spectacle has run its course. Then the attendants with their little wands, to the tip of which are attached eagle feathers, drive the reptiles back into the jars from which they came and they are carried again into the secret chamber of the snakes. The god of the rattlers has been appeased.

The bones of the sacrifice are consigned to a receptacle beneath the stone floor of the ceremonial chamber, there to mingle with those who have gone before as victims of a similar fate. Throughout the century of investigation of the ruins of the Cliff Dwellers, antecedents of the Pueblos, those who have made excavations have found, under certain portions of the buildings of those clusters, the remains of human bones. As the burial custom of these people is quite well understood and as remains were not customarily placed beneath their houses, this incidental discovery of such bones remained an unsolved riddle. That their presence is due to the custom of sacrifice and this disposition of portions of the remains is a new theory that offers a logical solution.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

PRICE OF COTTON GOES UP

Rally on Week-End Covering—January Closing 11.88 and Spot 11.95 —Advance 9 to 13 Points.

New York, Nov. 13.—After opening lower the cotton market rallied on week-end covering with January contracts selling up from 11.71 to 11.90 and closing at 11.88. The general list closed steady at a net advance of 9 to 13 points. Apprehensions of unfavorable weather in the South over Sunday and continued reports of an improving spot demand appeared to restrict offerings and buyers evidently found very little cotton for sale around the ring.

The market opened at a decline of 5 to 7 points with March selling off to 11.92 and May to 12.06 under liquidation and scattering local pressure which appeared to be inspired by relatively easy cables, a bearish crop estimate from foreign sources, and the failure of the weather map to show the freezing temperatures which have been expected. The private cables reporting that prominent English statisticians estimated this year's growth of American cotton at 12,300,000 bales, also stated that the same authorities indicated a probability that they would be forced to reduce their estimate placing the world's consumption at 15,000,000 bales and these advices were probably one of the chief factors on the early decline. The report of the census bureau showing domestic mill consumption for October of 500,635 bales excluding linters against 451,899 last year, or a total consumption of lint and linters for the month of 569,579 bales against 482,001, was considered in line with bullish ideas, however, and buyers were also influenced by favorable reports from the goods trade, as well as by predictions that freezing temperatures were likely in the South. Demand did not become general on the advance, but was sufficiently active to send March contracts up to 12.11 and May to 12.25 with the general list selling about 11 to 14 points net higher. The close was 2 or 3 points off from the best under realizing. Bullish spot market advices included reports that representatives of Swedish spinners were in the domestic markets for 100,000 bales of cotton to be shipped direct to Sweden and had arranged with the British government in order to avoid any interference with these consignments.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

Buying on Census Report on Consumption Sends Prices Upward.

New Orleans, Nov. 13.—Cotton stood at the advance during the greater part of the session today on buying stimulated by the census bureau report on consumption by American mills for October. Bulls considered that the total of 500,636 bales compared with 451,899 a year ago was an important indication of conditions in the mill trade. The market closed within 2 or 3 points of the highest of the day at a net advance of 11 to 13 points.

On the opening prices were depressed 1 to 3 points by selling for short account and unloading of long cotton. Liverpool was not as high as due and the weather map did not show expected cold weather in the cotton country. The decline hardly lasted beyond the first call, however, as the market soon felt pressure to buy from the long side.

While the weather map was considered much better than expected considerable rain was reported over the belt and October cold wave indicated to the west of the cotton country. Fear that the wet weather and this wet cold wave might combine in the cotton belt undoubtedly caused some of the buying.

Futures closing: December 11.53; January 11.73; March 11.90; May 12.16; July 12.26.

Assumption of Increase in Export Trade Caused Bullish Sentiment—Other Staples Also Gain.

Chicago, Nov. 13. — Assumptions that export trade from the United States would soon become larger encouraged bullish sentiment today in the wheat trade. SPECIALTIES ARE STRONGER

Strength Increased While Standard Stocks Are Further Neglected. Railways Are Narrow.

New York, Nov. 13.—The only distinguishing feature of today's dull and perfunctory market was the further strength of specialties and the continued neglect of standard stocks. War shares, automobile issues and some of the more obscure but high priced industrials, including a few of the tobacco group, recorded gains ranging from 3 to 13 points, while railway investments moved within extremely narrow limits when quoted at all.

Sentiment in conservative circles was inclined to greater caution, for which the resumption of activity in specialties was partly accountable. The metal shares are commanding more attention, not only because of the favorable conditions in that industry but for the additional reason that this class of stocks is "out of line" or lower than the balance of the list.

Mixed changes were shown by the exchange markets. It is believed that the French industrial commission now in this country to make heavy purchases of various supplies will soon enter into negotiations with our bankers for a credit of substantial proportions.

Today's bond market was dull and without especial feature. Total sales, par value, $2,770,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Here's the Neutral Greek Premier.

This is the first photograph of Zaimis, the new neutral Greek premier, to arrive in the United States. He succeeded Venizelos, who favored the Allies, but resigned when pressure was brought to bear by King Constantine. Zaimis does not believe Greece should live up to her treaty promises to Serbia to fight with her in case of attack from Bulgaria.

REST CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

North Carolina Affords Good Climate for Treatment.

A bulletin of the State Board of Health gives out the following bit of auvice to consumptives, especially to those who are prone to go away to take the "climate cure." It says: "Care without climate is a far better cure for tuberculosis than climate without care and unless one has the price for both that they had better remain at home and have the best care that he can afford." The reason for this advice is found in the now well known fact that consumption can be cured anywhere. "And because this is true," says the bulletin" it is far better for a patient of moderate means to remain at home and take treatment at a nearby sanitorium than it is for him to seek some advertised climate or resort without means to secure the proper care and treatment that his disease demands and that he might otherwise have."

"Rest, complete rest, freedom from worry or cares, is no wconsidered perhaps the most vital factor in the cure of tuberculosis, and this the tubercular traveller with moderate means is not likely to have. "The secret of the climate cure after all," advises the bulletin, "is living out in the open air day and night and this is as practical in North Carolina as much of the year as in many of the Western states.

"Taking the cure is right much of a game anyway; if you play to win, you win; if you are careless and indifferent, you are more likely to lose than to win."

TRINITY ARCHIVE FOR NOVEMBER

Improvement Over October Number Many Worthy Productions.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Trinity College, N. C., Nov. 13.—The November number of the Trinity Archive, the student literary monthly, appeared from the press today. The number is in many respects an improvement over the October and contains many worthy productions.

The list of contents is as follows: "The Compact," story, by "N'Importe"; "Vagaries," sketch by Jack W. Wallace; "My Evening Star," poem, by Miss Catharine Crayton; "The Religious Heritage Among the Negroes," essay, by W. R. Shelton; "The Prescription," story, by "Nick O'Teen"; "The Wealth of the Poor," poem by Mr. D. W. Newsom, '99; "A Fragment," story, by "Eph. R. Vescent"; "His Explanation," story by R. Harris Durham; Review of Ernest Poole's "The Harbor," by G. W. H. Britt.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 13.—The University of Minnesota football eleven took another step toward the Big Nine Conference championship today by defeating the University of Chicago 20 to 8 on a snow-covered field. The Gophers' attack was powerful while the defense was virtually impenatrable when the Maroons threatened the Minnesota goal.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—Pennsylvania and Michigan fought their annual football battle on Franklin Field today and neither side was able to score. The game was a disappointment to the followers of the teams.

"OPEN AIR SCHOOLS NEEDED"

"Growing Necessity for Undeveloped School Children."

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 13.—"Open air schools have come to be a real necessity," said a member of the State Educational Department yesterday. "Only recently," said he, "there have come to our attention a number of instances of real need for such a combination of health improvement and school work as the open air schools are especially designed and are able to give. These cases, for the most part, are children who are not up to normal in health and who yet insist on getting an education. They have bright minds and in a number of instances lead their classes as long as they are physically able, but in a few months they grow thin and pale, lost weight, become nervous and have to be kept at home.

"Then there are the cripples, those with curvature of the spine, with lame feet, or some other defect—it seems that they, too, should be included. Sunshine and fresh air are so good for so many things that it seems such a pity to not let all the tots have it that need it. And you would be surprised," he declared, "how many that would be. In looking over a school room of boys and girls, I've wanted to pick out as many as a dozen and give them such treatment—rest, study, play, nourishment, all in the fresh air and under the care of some good teacher-doctor—and see how they grow, how rapidly they begin to take on glowing faces, increase in weight and meanwhile do better school work than they have ever done before."

In conclusion, this man with the fresh air ideals said further hopefully: "It is only a matter of time when we will have open air schools for our tubercular school children. We are up against that problem now, and it seems to me that there's no other way to solve it than tot have a school where children suffering from tuberculosis can go, take the coure and in the meantime improve their minds. In reality it would be nothing short of a santorium with the school feature added, and there is just what they need and what we want and must have."

OPIUM SMUGGLERS OPERATING ALONG THE MEXICAN BORDER.

One Arrest is Made by United States Revenue Officials.

San Antonio, Texas, Nov. 13.—United States revenue officials secured information today tending to show that an organized band of opium smugglers are operating between this city and the Mexican border and distributing the drug through an agency in San Antonio to retail dealers in other states. One arrest was made here today and it was stated that others said to be implicated in the conspiracy will be taken into custody. Several are located in cities outside Texas.

According to information secured by revenue officials, at least 100 cans of opium, valued at $120 a can, have been smuggled across the border here. The man arrested today waived examination and is held in default of $1,000 bond.
